S&L regulators use slush fund for the good life

By John Holusha
(c) Washington Star

Washington — High executives of the government agency that regulates thrift institutions have been anything but thrifty with the agency's cash.

By dipping into a $1 million slush fund that is exempt from congressional scrutiny, officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the regulatory agency for savings and loan associations, have treated themselves to fancy dinners, limousines and trips to posh resorts.

According to documents examined by the Washington Star, the agency's so-called "imprest fund" has paid $1,488.36 for an office Christmas party, $1,500 for a table for 10 for ex-Chairman Thomas Bomar and $324 for six limousines to drive out-of-town officials to a party at former Chairman Garth Martson's house.

According to the agency's records, the former director of the FHLBB's Office of Finance used the fund for such things as $146.50 for his annual physical examination, $207 for his auto insurance, $21 for theater tickets, $49.71 for pictures of himself, $36.75 to reweave a suit torn at the office and $30 as a contribution for an employee's going-away present.

The official, Marshall Burks, left the agency in June 1976 on what FHLBB employees say was short notice.

A recent General Accounting Office study of the bank board criticized use of the imprest fund. The GAO noted that ". . . imprest fund expenditures have been made for board employees' wives and other miscellaneous recreation and entertainment expenses."

Altogether, the GAO said, the imprest fund paid $375,000 for activities not reported to Congress in 1976. The total in the fund varies, but usually exceeds $1 million.

The current chairman of the FHLBB, Robert McKinney, has clamped down on some of the perks — perquisites or privileges of office — financed by the fund and has promised a thorough review of how it is handled.

The FHLBB is one of four federal bank regulatory agencies that don't have to go to Congress for money. Rather, they are self-supporting through examination fees and assessments. (The Federal Reserve also "earns" $6.6 billion a year through the conduct of monetary policy.)

The bank board is subject to a budget limitation set by Congress, but the imprest fund does not come under this limitation.

Imprest fund money comes from the 12 regional federal home loan banks, which are analagous to the Federal Reserve's decentralized bank system. The home loan banks are technically owned by the savings and loan institutions, but are subject to management by the FHLBB.

The home loan banks' income is generated by buying mortgages from individual S&Ls and then selling securities backed by the mortgages in credit markets. Since the whole structure rests on the interest and fees paid on home mortgages, the imprest funds are just well-laundered homeowner cash.

Though the agency is little known, the industry it regulates is huge. Savings and loan associations control assets of more than $400 billion.

Some of the expenses paid by the imprest fund appear likely to draw the wrath of Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., chairman of the appropriations subcommittee that handles the FHLBB budget.

They include, beside the limousines, first class air travel, accommodations at luxury hotels and plenty of good food and drink.

Many of these expenses are connected with meetings of the agency's advisory council, which is composed of members of the S&L industry and meets periodically for the purported purpose of advising the board on industry problems.

According to a sample of vouchers submitted in connection with committee activities, the meetings seem to be an introduction to the good life for FHLBB employees.

Before the actual meetings, there is an agenda meeting. In February 1976 the secretary of the board, J.J. Finn, and his personal secretary flew first class to Phoenix, Ariz., to plan a meeting.

Later in the year, Finn, his secretary and Donald Kaplan, the agency's chief economist, and his wife spent three days at the lush Homestead (Va.) resort planning another meeting. Total cost $697.30.

The principal impression the vouchers give of the council meetings themselves is one of overwhelming thirst. At a council meeting in March 1976, the bill for the first night's reception ran to $573.23.

Liquor alone for the next day's lunch totaled $141.90, and drinks before dinner totaled $381.95. Wine added another $165. The council has two dozen members.

In all, the council meeting at the Madison Hotel in Washington cost a total of $5,576.70, not including limousine service. The bill included over $500 for Finn and his secretary, Rhonda Furmanski, who checked into the hotel for the duration of the meeting.

McKinney has ordered that any future agenda meetings be held at the board's home offices. Advisory committee members will be required to fly tourist class and will be limited to $50 a day expenses. (That wouldn't even cover the cost of a room at the Madison).

In addition a spokesman said, the board this week will adopt rules prohibiting board employees from accepting hospitality from the industry.

Defense study worries Pentagon

(c) New York Times

Washington — The Defense Department has quietly undertaken a major study involving the Joint Chiefs of Staff that could lead to a significant overhaul of the nation's military command structure.

The study, at the request of President Carter, is the most far-reaching in years and has stirred resentment among senior military officials in the Pentagon who fear that Defense Secretary Harold Brown is seeking to blunt the influence of the military leaders.

Steel pay plan endorsed

Duluth, Minn. (UPI) — A United Steelworkers union spokesman said Monday an incentive pay offer by steel companies, if revised, might lead to a break in a 14-week-old strike by 18,000 steelworkers in Minnesota and upper Michigan.

The strike has shut down most taconite iron mines in the nation.

Lloyd McBride, Steelworkers president, endorsed the plan at a weekend meeting with 30 union negotiators in Virginia, Minn., and predicted the strike will go on for months if miners reject it.

Man's place often in home

New York (UPI) — While mom is out working, more and more "househusbands" are cooking, mending, washing dishes and taking care of the kids, Business Week magazine said Monday.

It said there now are 2.2 million American men who neither hold nor seek jobs — an increase of 71 percent over the last nine years.

Over the same period, the percentage of employed married women increased from 41.5 to 52.4 percent the magazine said.

Alcoholism link indicated

Kansas City, Kan. (UPI) — New research indicates alcoholism might be linked to a biochemical hereditary factor, according to an authority on the disease that has affected nine million Americans.

"The cause of alcoholism, in truth, is unknown," said Dr. Donald Goodwin, "but it does run in families and this is a starting point."

British firemen announce strike

London (AP) — Britain's 35,000 firemen will abandon their duties and strike next Monday for a 30 percent pay increase, their union announced Monday. Military units were expected to be mobilized to replace the firefighters.

London Police Commissioner David McNee has said British policemen also are moving closer toward striking for more pay.

Kidnappers want $12 million

Rome (AP) — Kidnappers forced Duke Massimiliano Grazioli to stop his car and Rome's outskirts Monday and drove away with him. His family said a man telephoned later and demanded $12 million in ransom.

Man arrested in 10 shootings

New Orleans (AP) — A former Internal Revenue Service auditor was arrested Monday after his wife, father-in-law and eight other persons were wounded in a citywide shooting spree.

Carlos Poree, 35, of New Orleans was booked on 10 counts of attempted murder, one count of armed robbery and three counts of simple battery on police officers, according to police Superintendent Clarence Giarrusso. Poree was taken into custody near a downtown brokerage firm where five of the victims were shot, officers said.

A spokesman at Charity Hospital said four of the injured were in critical condition. Three of them probably would be paralyzed from spinal wounds, he said. The other six victims were being treated for various gunshot wounds.

Police spokesman Tony Bonagura said two vice squad plainclothesmen, driving past the brokerage office, heard the final shots of the hour-long spree, stopped their car, jumped out and were running toward the scene when Poree came walking around the corner, tucking his gun into his waistband.

"They drew down on him, shouted, 'Freeze!' and he decided to give up," Bonagura said.

The battery charges stemmed from a scuffle Poree had with officers who tried to put him in prison clothing, Giarrusso said.

Officers scuffled again with Poree during fingerprinting, a police spokesman said. Poree was taken to Charity Hospital for treatment.

The shooting began at mid-morning when Poree's wife, Diane, 34, and her father, Alvin J. Broussard, were shot at Broussard's home in a residential neighborhood about two miles from the downtown area.

The regional chief of the IRS said Poree left his $19,332-a-year job auditing accounts last December. He refused to give a reason for the departure. His mother-in-law said Poree had not worked since then.

After the shootings at the Broussard home, police said Poree apparently chose his victims at random from lunch hour crowds at a French Quarter plaza and the office of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., a major brokerage firm with offices in the heart of the commercial district.

Hampton (left) apology won't settle 'affront,' said Robinson.

Hampton apology rejected

By J. L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln City Councilman Joe Hampton said Monday he has privately apologized to fellow Councilman John Robinson for using the word "nigger" to describe Robinson's actions during a City Council meeting last Monday night.

But Robinson said, during a Monday afternoon council meeting, that he won't settle for anything short of a public apology.

Hampton's statement was made public by the Lincoln Star on Saturday. Hampton admitted using the word in a discussion with Robinson following a lengthy and sometimes heated meeting of the council last week.

The issue came up during open session Monday when Robinson referred to a Thursday story in the Lincoln Journal which said he was "heckling" Hampton following the controversial meeting.

"I wasn't," Robinson began, before council Chairman Dick Baker interrupted and ruled Robinson "out of order."

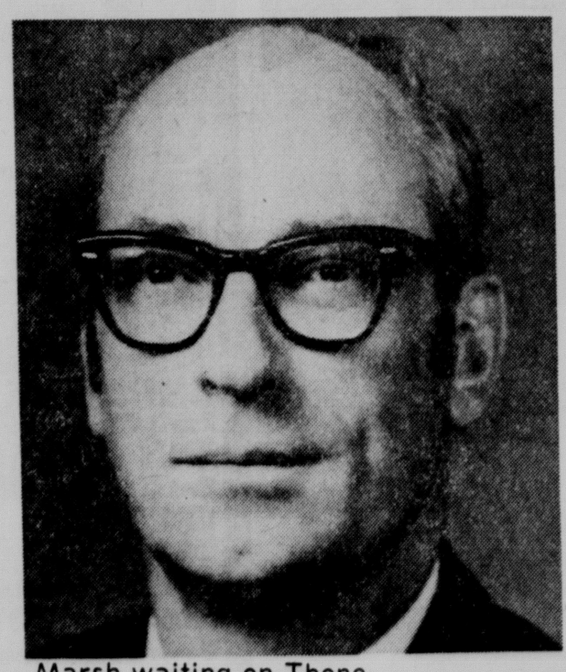

Robinson explained that the purpose of the public portion of the meeting was to air opinions of the council, and what he had to say was in keeping with that intention.

"I will not accept any private apology, and any one-on-one approach by Mr. Hampton will be interpreted as an act of aggression. The statement was an affront to all black citizens, consequently I won't accept any private apology," he said.

Hampton said, "John' aren't you even man enough to admit . . . " before Baker stopped him and cautioned that there would be no arguing during the council meeting.

"For the record," Hampton continued, "I did apologize this noon for a poor choice of a word, if he doesn't want to accept, that's his business. If he wants to cry, that's his business."

Baker again cautioned about private arguments and went on with the meeting.

Marsh waiting on Thone.

Marsh looks toward higher office

By Don Walton
Star Staff Writer

State Treasurer Frank Marsh said Monday he may run for lieutenant governor next year if Congressman Charles Thone seeks the governorship.

But if Thone ultimately decides not to pursue the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Marsh may go after it himself.

Marsh said he has discussed his political options with the 1st District congressman. They also include a re-election bid as state treasurer and private business ventures.

"Charley Thone and I have discussed the governor's race as it might involve either or both of us," Marsh said.

"I have had some of the same discussions with Vance Rogers," who is already campaigning as a Republican gubernatorial candidate.

"I guess I am still waiting to see what Charley is definitely going to do," Marsh said.

"If Thone goes in, I'll stay out. If not, I'll have to see. Before I would jump, I would need to carefully analyze what support I would be able to get from his constituency."

Thone has announced his tentative intention to formally declare his candidacy for governor next January.

Already in the GOP scrap are Rogers, the former president of Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln; former North Platte Mayor Robert Phares, and Kimball businessman Stan Juelfs.

The winning gubernatorial aspirant will be teamed with the winner of the Republican lieutenant governor primary race next November.

"Having been lieutenant governor (1971-75), I have the credentials to seriously consider that race," Marsh noted. "Hopefully, I believe I could strengthen the Republican effort."

And, he said, it would "seem senseless to me to have Charley Thone, Vance Rogers and Frank Marsh all chasing the same kind of financial support" in a GOP gubernatorial primary fight.

Marsh has been treasurer since 1975.

Prior to his 1970 election as lieutenant governor, he was secretary of state for 18 years. Thus, his consecutive years of service in an elected state constitutional office now number 25.

And Marsh's consecutive election triumphs (including primaries and general elections) have reached 20.

The 53-year-old state treasurer left the lieutenant governor's office after one four-year term. That year, Nebraskans elected their governor and lieutenant governor as a team for the first time, with the Democratic team of J. James Exon and Gerald Whelan besting the GOP team of Richard Marvel and Anne Batchelder.

While Marsh could seek re-election as treasurer, the constitution places a limit of two consecutive terms on that office.

Few voters expected

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. Tuesday, but political observers are predicting few voters will visit them.

Election Commissioner Bill Davidson said that the city may flirt with an 18-year-old record low turnout of 19% of eligible voters. He expects 16,000 to 18,000 of the 77,000 eligible voters to go to the polls.

City Council Chairman Dick Baker said he thinks the total may even be lower, particularly if the weather is bad. "I think it may be around 15,000," he said.

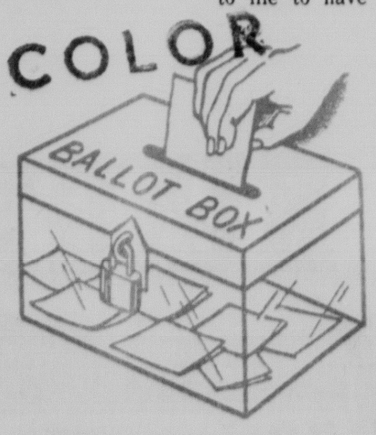

Davidson said his prediction is based on past performance in special elections. "There just isn't as much interest in a special election with only two issues on the ballot as when there is a race for president, the Senate or Congress," he said.

The predicted low turnout may help passage of both the $6.8 million storm sewer bond issue and the $7 million bond issue for the Civic Center, according to Baker.

"I think the majority of the people who will be going to the polls will be going because they have a special interest in one issue or the other or both," he said.

Polling places will be similar to the spring election with two exceptions. Zeaman School is no longer a polling place and voters in that precinct should go to the Braille Foundation at 52nd and Linden Streets. Commercial Federal Savings and Loan at the southwest corner of 56th and O Streets is no longer a polling place and citizens who voted there should go to the First National Bank at the northeast corner of the same intersection.

Citizens with questions about voting should call the election commissioner's office at 473-6311.

Pony will have a new home today

Durham, N.H. (UPI) — King, the abused 10-year-old Shetland pony, has a new home.

The pony, discovered in a dung-filled stall in August in Plaistow, N.H., will be placed in a private residence Tuesday by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

King became a symbol of animal abuse when he was found with hoofs that had not been trimmed for years. They were about 15 inches long and curved upwards to resemble what one SPCA member called "Turkish slippers."

In addition, King's stall had not been cleared out in years, and the animal apparently existed for years on a diet of hay.

Officials took the animal to the University of New Hampshire where his hoofs were trimmed and his diet improved.

Peter Saunders, SPCA spokesman, said now that the pony was healthy it would be placed in a private farm in Rockingham County. The exact location of the farm will not be disclosed to avoid harassment and curiosity seekers, Saunders said.

"King's sad experience may serve to remind us of the importance of humane treatment for all of us," Saunders said.

Officials felt a private farm would be best for the animal "so that he may be able to enjoy the privacy, training and personal care that he deserves."

Not one dam inspected in 5 years

Washington (AP) — Five years ago, Congress approved an inspection program aimed at preventing disasters such as the Taccoa dam collapse.

But as of Monday not one dam has been inspected.

An Army Engineers spokesman attributes the failure to a lack of money.

"Congress authorized just enough money to make an inventory of the nation's dams," said Locke Mouton, the Army Engineer's spokesman.

That inventory, completed in 1975, estimates it would cost $367.5 million for the inspections. The first $15 million authorized for the program since the survey is for this fiscal year, which started on Oct. 1, and no decision has been made so far on how to spend it.

Meanwhile, the chairman of a House environment subcommittee said the Georgia dam collapse could have been avoided "totally, completely, absolutely" if the federal inspection law had been enforced.

"These dams are like a loaded shotgun pointed at the people downstream," said Rep. Leo J. Ryan, D-Calif.

He predicted other dam failures and said the danger is particularly great along the Appalachian chain of mountains, where he said there are "any number" of small, old dams which could give way.

Part of the delay stemmed from governmental philosophy, Mouton said. The Nixon administration, he said, wanted the federal government to set dam safety standards while leaving inspections up to the states.

The federal program is aimed at the numerous dams built by power companies, farmers, water conservation districts and private entities such as Toccoa Falls Bible College, which built the Toccoa dam in 1937 for water storage and hydroelectric power.

A civil engineering professor told Congress earlier this year that at least 14,000 dams in the United States have been built without any control over their design and construction.

The Army Engineers inventory classifies 9,000 of the 49,500 total dams in its inventory as "high-hazard" but the classification does not refer to the structural integrity. Instead, it means there would be substantial loss of life and property damage if the dam failed.

The Toccoa Dam was listed as "high-hazard," Mouton said.

The corps has written tentative dam safety standards and "model" plans for states wishing to create an agency to inspect dams and insure their structural integrity, he said.

The Georgia dam collapse prompted Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, to renew his plea Monday for federal dam safety regulations. His first plea followed the 1976 collapse of the Teton Dam in Idaho, which killed 11 persons and caused millions of dollars in property damage. At least 38 persons died in the Toccoa dam failure.

"I think this demonstrates that we can't afford any further delay," McClure said Monday.

McClure introduced two bills aimed at allowing dam inspections after the Teton Dam collapse. One calls for federal inspections but allows states to do the inspections if their programs meet federal standards. The other would give the states authority to inspect dams not owned by the federal government and would allow the governors to ask for federal inspections of dams on federal property.

A Senate Environmental and Public Works Committee aide said hearings might be scheduled soon on those bills "in view of yesterday's happenings."

The Bureau of Reclamation, which built the Teton Dam, reviewed all of its 330 dams after the 1976 collapse and found several to be endangered. Mouton says the Army Engineers inspects the dams it builds "all the time." It has built about 400 dams.

The two agencies are the federal government's major dam builders.

Bible college students' faith is unshaken

Toccoa, Ga. (AP) — Their faith in God unshaken, students at the small northeast Georgia Bible college where at least 38 persons died when a dam burst said Monday their religious fellowship will see them through mourning and rebuilding.

"We don't understand the meaning of it all or the purpose of it," said A. J. Moser, vice president of Toccoa Falls Bible College. "But we feel very strongly that God is in control."

Twenty children were among the 38 known dead in the flood. All the victims were students or staff of the college or members of their families.

One man remained missing and was presumed dead late Monday. About 45 persons were injured, 12 of them seriously enough to be hospitalized.

In North Carolina and Tennessee, weekend flooding from the same heavy rains that hit north Georgia killed 11 persons, including six children.

Toccoa Creek — normally a placid stream only inches deep — turned into a destructive torrent about 1:30 a.m. Sunday when an earthen dam burst a half-mile upstream from the college and Kelley Barnes Lake spilled over 187-foot Toccoa Falls and down to the campus below.

A 30-foot wall of muddy water, throwing boulders and tree trunks before it, smashed into a student dormitory and two mobile home parks. Of about 20 mobile homes, only one remained Monday.

"We've all been praying that God would touch our campus in a special way," said Lorene Hays, 24, of Utica, N.Y., a senior at the 425-student college.

"We pray he'll raise spiritual giants from among us," she said after consoling a friend who lost his wife and a child in the flood.

President Carter declared Georgia a major disaster area Monday, making federal assistance available for disaster victims and local public agencies touched by the devastation.

Searchers using heavy equipment tore apart the piles of trees, boards and shredded metal Monday, looking for the bodies of two men still missing.

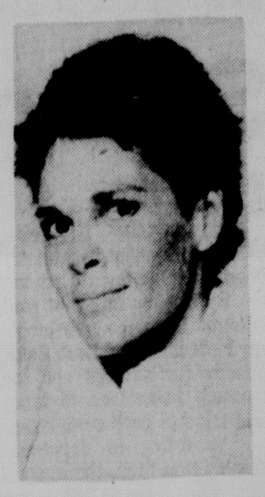

Some students went home. Others were housed in a church in Toccoa, about two miles away.

"God has a reason" for causing the tragedy, said Mrs. Jim Weiss, a cook on the campus. She and her husband, a student, lost all their belongings, but they and their four children survived.

"We see sunshine today and we're starting over," said Mrs. Weiss.

Personalities

MacGraw, McQueen break up

Screen stars Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw, whose romance led to the breakup of her marriage to movie mogul Bob Evans, have separated, a lawyer for the couple said Monday.

One of them will probably file for divorce to end their four-year marriage, said lawyer Ken Ziffrin.

The couple was married in a Cheyenne, Wyo., city park under a cottonwood tree in 1973 by a justice of the peace who halted his golf game to perform the ceremony.

The parting of McQueen, 47, and Miss MacGraw, 38, was amicable and they are remaining "on very friendly terms," the attorney said.

McQueen has acted in such movies as "The Great Escape," "Bullitt" and "The Thomas Crown Affair."

Miss MacGraw, who previously appeared in "Goodbye, Columbus" and "Love Story," has just finished filming her first film since she married McQueen and quit show business.

Lillian Carter visits Iowa

Lillian Carter, President Carter's 79-year-old mother, arrived in Iowa Monday night.

Mrs. Carter came to Des Moines for an overnight stay at Terrace Hill with Gov. and Mrs. Robert D. Ray before the departure of 250 Iowans for the Friendship Force exchange to Dublin, Ireland, Tuesday.

The Iowa trip is the second Friendship Force exchange. The concept was originted by Carter when he was Georgia governor.

Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Ray, Iowa honorary chairman, will accompany the group.

Amin criticizes Carter

Uganda President Idi Amin charged Monday that President Carter is a prisoner of Zionist interests in the United States and "must continue the game lest he be assassinated."

Arab participation urged

Golda Meir, former Israeli premier, said Monday a peace settlement can be reached in the Middle East if there is "true and honest Arab participation."

Conductor is honored

Arthur Fiedler, the 82-year-old Boston Pops conductor, was named honorary Augusta, Maine, fire chief during an intermission Sunday of a Boston Symphony Orchestra concert which attracted 7,200 persons.

Fiedler was given a hat and fire hatchet.

Next year's plans join energy to fill Carter stay-home time

Washington (AP) — President Carter officially postponed his planned foreign trip to devote himself to energy legislation. Actually, aides said Monday, Carter also will be busy with planning for 1978 during his stay-at-home time.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance announced the postponement, saying Carter informed heads of the nine countries on his intended route that he hopes "a mutually convenient date could be found for a later visit in the near future."

Vance said the president's message emphasized a conviction that "his personal involvement was vital to the development of sound energy legislation."

Carter will reiterate his concern about energy policy Tuesday in a broadcast address to the nation scheduled for 8 p.m. CST.

Since Carter already has engaged in extensive personal lobbying of Congress members in behalf of his energy package, there is a limit to what else he can do on that matter during the stay-at-home period.

But aides said Carter, who repeatedly pledged to stay home if Congress had not completed action on his energy program, will be taking a very personal interest in the efforts of Senate-House conferees to compromise wide differences in energy bills passed by the two bodies.

Carter's presence in Washington may have its greatest impact in psychological and abstract political terms, by showing him at his desk and on the job during the critical stages of the energy debate.

Aides saw other advantages in his staying home. They said the president's decision to postpone his travels, scheduled to run from Nov. 22 to Dec. 2, will give him additional time to prepare for the 1978 congressional session.

One associate said Carter will be consulting closely with Democratic congressional leaders on the timing of new legislative proposals to be submitted to Congress early in the new year.

Inflation war needs 'bite,' Heller says

Atlanta (AP) — President Carter's war against inflation won't have much "bite" unless he adopts a bolder approach to finding more jobs while controlling prices, says economist Walter Heller.

Heller said in a speech to the Food Marketing Institute Conference that the President should either issue strongly enforced guidelines or trade tax breaks for wage moderation. But he added that full-scale wage and price controls are not required.

Heller, an economist at the University of Minnesota, was chairman of President Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisors and also advised President Johnson.

Escapee says he's lost much

By Michael Field
London Telegraph

Paris — The destruction of the former professional and commercial classes in Cambodia is nearing completion, and a primitive society of obedient peasants has been set up by the Khmer Rouge Communists, according to an engineer who recently escaped from there.

Canadian-educated Pin Yathay, 34, from Phnom Penh, who is a former secretary general of the Association of Cambodian Engineers, arrived in France last month. He had crossed the heavily guarded border into southeastern Thailand in June.

He is the only survivor of a family of 18 who stuck together from April 18, 1975, when — along with the entire population of 2 million in the Cambodian capital — they were expelled from the city at gunpoint.

Since then Pin Yathay has lost his wife and three young children. The youngest, 3, succumbed to beri-beri in the Cardamon mountains. The oldest, 9, died in unexplained circumstances shortly after being forced to join the youth organization. The third child, 6, was left in charge of a Cambodian woman, all of whose children had died.

During a mountain and jungle walk of great hardship the couple became separated while hiding from Khmer Rouge patrols, and Pin Yathay was obliged to continue his march to freedom alone.

He believes his wife must be dead either from hunger and exposure, or executed for attempting to flee. The rest of the family, cousins and in-laws, like many Cambodian families, are all dead.

The elimination of civil society as it formerly existed is symbolized by the fact that all those expelled from Phnom Penh were divested of all their identity papers, including driving licenses and personal photographs, all of which were simply thrown away by Khmer Rouge guards.

For months, Pin Yathay, a Sino-Cambodian whose family was once comfortably off, managed to hide his true identity and pose as a simple mechanic employed by the Public Works Department. In fact he was a department head, and was recognized by a former employee early this year and immediately blacklisted.

He began his escape from a village near Pursat, in western Cambodia, where he led a semi-clandestine existence thanks partly to the corruption of Khmer Rouge headmen who accepted gold in exchange for extra rice rations and turned a blind eye to his obviously faked laissez-passer.

Among the tasks Pin Yatnay had to carry out during his three years under the communist regime, which he described as an unrelieved nightmare, were ditching, heavy road work, forest clearance, ploughing, rice planting and harvesting.

He said that thousands of his compatriots from the now deserted towns were toiling in remote unhealthy parts of the country where they had to build their own shelter against frequent heavy rains, and were entirely without medical assistance.

He saw as many as 10 people dying from disease and weakness every day. Virulent malaria and beri-beri are the principal scourges.

Unemployed leave Saigon to learn farming

Vietnam Revisited

By Richard Dudman
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Editor's note: Richard B. Dudman, Washington Bureau chief of the St. Lousi Post-Dispatch, is the first American reporter allowed inside Vietnam for an extended stay since the communist victory 2½ years ago. This is the fifth of a series.

Ben Cat, Vietnam — Here is the story of two Saigon men and how they became pioneer farmers under South Vietnam's new rulers.

Before the communist victory in 1975, Ninh Van Diem, now 42 years old, used to ride his Honda motorbike around the city carrying passengers for hire on the rear seat. He says he made enough to support himself, his wife and their nine children.

Do Manh Hung, a bright-eyed 26-year-old, was a $22-a-month secretary in the Saigon brewery that produces "33" brand beer, with a wife and two children to support. He, too, was making ends meet.

Things were tough for both of them after "liberation." The bottom dropped out of Diem's motorbike taxi business. Hung had been laid off three months earlier, as the Thieu regime began to crumble.

Presumably they were on the slim rice ration of two kilograms a month per adult that others have said is alloted to persons without approved jobs. If so, any other food had to be bought at many times the fixed price on the free market.

Like many others they had little choice, when any savings ran out, but to begin selling off their belongings to pay for food. Diem sold his Honda.

Then they individually heard about a pioneering venture the new government was organizing. Its two-fold aim was to put the city unemployed to work in the countryside and increase the nation's food supply.

When they were interviewed in their dirt-floored homes in a "new economic zone" 20 miles northeast of here and about 50 miles north of Saigon, both men said they had volunteered and were glad they had done so.

Government officials had arranged a visit to the place in response to a request to visit one of the "good" zones other foreigners were said to have seen in that area and a more austere example in a region where agriculture was more difficult.

This one was austere enough for most purposes. The grass-walled houses with corrugated tile roofs lined a dusty dirt road behind a muddy ditch on each side that one had to jump to reach the houses.

The land never had been farmed before. At the edge of the farm plots laid out for the new village could be seen a straggly line of dead trees, some of them appearing green, but only because they were partly covered by climbing vines. Officials said they were all that was left of the old Bang Lang forest, a Viet Cong hideout and supply base until the United States destroyed it with chemical sprays.

They said Tan Long village had been established July 10, 1975, and comprised 979 households and a total population of 4,935. There were a crude clothing store, a clinic, an elementary school and a produce market.

The Diem family took the occasion in stride when still another news reporter approached, accompanied by communist officials from Hanoi, a provincial cadre and the chairman of the "People's Committee" that administers the village. He had met the press before, as well as delegations from other communist countries and groups of "progressive" westerners. The village is an easy drive from Saigon, and Diem is articulate and enthusiastic.

His wife poured glasses of tea and Diem soon appeared from a back shed where a neighbor had been giving him a haircut before the guests arrived.

He said the government had supplied him with the unfurnished house, a plot of ground, a few tools, seeds, fertilizer, kerosene for his two small lamps, a modest cash allowance and rice to eat until he could grow his own.

He had to learn farming from the local peasants, burning off the weeds that covered the untilled land and digging individual holes for the rice plants without plowing. For his next crop he said he will have the use of one of the three tractors in the village.

Diem said he grows the rice on three acres that he farms collectively with other new farmers who have similar plots. He also raises manioc, the root used to make tapioca, on his one-third acre private plot. He said he grinds it into powder for cakes for his family and sells a four-to-five-ton surplus to his neighbors.

That sounded high, but an Australian agricultural specialist said the large root can be grown up to 20 tons to the acre the first year.

He raises chickens and ducks and has built a sty for a pair of pigs he plans to get soon.

The rice growing developed slowly. Until last August, he said, the government kept him on free rice, at 10 kilograms (22 pounds) a month per person. Now that he is self supporting at last, he can keep 13 kilograms per person and sell the rest to the government at the fixed rate.

Diem said he likes the country better than the city and enjoys the sense of self-reliance he has developed in the two years. He goes back to Saigon on the bus sometimes, to visit friends and to see his married daughter there. He gave the impression that he didn't miss the Honda.

The other farmer interviewed, Hung, was selected at random and said he had never before met a foreign visitor. He said he had reached the twelfth grade in Saigon but had flunked out of school and had to dodge the draft by understating his age. His farming experience was much like Diem's.

The sparse furnishings of his little house, no better than Diem's, included a table and chairs, a few dishes and pots, three bottles, a teapot and drinking glasses, small kerosene lamps and a broken alarm clock. He said he had no radio yet but his wife had the use of a neighbor's treadle sewing machine. The baby, born in the new village, was sleeping in a crude cradle on the dirt floor.

Hung, too, said he liked the pioneering life. He returns to the city sometimes on visits after the harvest is in, but he said he had never considered moving back.

Some do. The young village chairman, interviewed in a tiny headquarters building under a red hammer-and-sickle flag that said "Long Live the Communist Party of Vietnam," said 35 percent had left, including some who were "lazy" and others who were skilled workmen and had been given jobs elsewhere.

The government's own figures suggest the attrition rate is higher at other new farm communities. It has a goal of reducing Saigon's wartime population of 4,000,000 to 2,500,000 by 1979. But the official figure for net departures has remained a 700,000 for more than a year.

All sources seem to agree that the new farmers are free to return to the city if they choose. If they do, though, they face some economic pressures that helped persuade them to go to the countryside in the first place.

At a provinical headquarters for the resettlement program, Tran Mgoc Khanh, a former National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) army officer who now is deputy chairman of the people's committee of Song Be province, said a massive redistribution of the labor force in South Vietnam was necessary because the United States had displaced the population in its effort to halt the revolution.

As he put it, the United States "herded" people first into strategic hamlets, then into "new life" hamlets — different names for stockaded areas where the population could be registered and presumably separated from the guerrillas.

He said U.S. bombing was designed to drive people into Saigon and other towns and cities that were considered secure. He described An Loc, former capital of the old Binh Long province, as a city of 38,000 that the American strategy had reduced to nothing.

Khanh said the huge new Song Be province, comprising four of South Vietnam's former 44 provinces, has nearly 4,000 square miles and a population of only 680,000.

"We need people," he said. "We are going to take a half million from Ho Chi Minh City (Saigon). So far we have resettled 140,000."

He pointed to a map with about 100 oblongs on it, each the site of an actual or planned new economic zone village or "commune" of 5,000 to 7,000 persons. He said 23 had been completed.

Officials said they had learned by experience that better advance planning and preparation was important. Army teams and youth brigades from the city now build better houses, dig wells and plow the fields the first time before the new tenants arrive. International organizations are beginning to make soil tests to see which crops will thrive in the new areas.

The government plans to bring 400,000 acres under cultivation in the current five-year plan and another 1,600,000 in the next, to double the nation's tilled land by 1985.

How is the plan working so far? Interviews with two farmers, with escorts from Hanoi wanting to hurry back to Saigon for another appointment, were little basis for judgment.

Perhaps Diem and Hung should be visited again in a year or two, to see if they are still making it.

Next: religion makes a peace of sorts.

Algeria blasts Morocco plan to cross border

Algiers, Algeria (UPI) — Tension between neighboring Algeria and Morocco over the former Spanish Sahara reached a new peak Monday with a stern Algerian warning against Morocco's plan to pursue Polisario Front guerrillas across the frontier.

Morocco's plan, announced Sunday by King Hassan II, was denounced as "warlike" in an Algerian government communique issued after President Houari Boumedienne's Cabinet met.

The government newspaper El Chaab, in an even stronger reaction, said "Any violation of Algerian frontiers by Moroccan troops would mean war."

The Polisario rebels seek independence for Spain's former Sahara territory, which was annexed by Morocco and Mauritania in 1976 after Spain pulled out. The guerrillas receive open support from Algeria and Libya.

In a nationwide television address, Hassan said, "Morocco finds itself compelled to exercise the right of pursuit to enforce respect for its territorial integrity.

Algeria said Hassan's warning "coincides with an anti-Algerian campaign in France and with the deployment of French troops in the region."

METROMAIL'S FAMILY ALBUM

Metromail — one of the world's largest direct mail marketing firms — is headquartered right here in Lincoln, Nebraska in the Airport Industrial Park.

We're just part of a family of companies spread over the whole United States. Our parent organization is Metromedia, which has four divisions . . . some of which we know you know!

BROADCASTING — Metromedia is the largest independent broadcaster in the country, operating 6 television stations and 12 radio stations in 11 major U.S. cities.

OUT-OF-HOME-MEDIA — Foster and Kleiser owns and services approximately 25,000 outdoor boards in 16 major markets. Metro-Transit Advertising holds franchises for space on mass transportation in 7 major metropolitan areas.

ENTERTAINMENT — This division includes the world-famous Harlem Globe Trotters and The Ice Capades. In addition, Metromedia Producers Corporation syndicates programs of its own as well as those of other companies — having produced such regulars as the award-winning Merv Griffin Show, specials like the highly acclaimed Jacques Cousteau series and spectaculars of Rose Parade caliber. The most technically advanced videotaping facility in the industry can be found in Metromedia Square in Los Angeles . . . also headquarters for Norman Lear, producer of many top-rated television comedy series.

PUBLISHING AND MAIL ADVERTISING — Cole Directories provide valuable local market data for businesses in 110 U.S. cities . . . and that brings us back to Metromail — leading innovator in direct mail marketing, offering clients computerized market segmentation of the national consumer household audience.

As are our sister companies, Metromail is growing. If you'd like to grow along with us and are interested in accounting, clerical, marketing research, data processing, production, methods engineering, sales or client service, call Mike Shea, our Personnel Manager for an appointment. Battered woman verdict may be cause for concern

"This is a precedent-setting decision," a happy defense attorney said after his client won a qualified acquittal on a murder charge. The case has several implications, one of which, if the decision is seen as a precedent, is chilling.

The case involves Francine Hughes, 30, whose husband beat her repeatedly during 14 years of marriage and living together after divorce. Mrs. Hughes poured gasoline under the bed of her ex-husband as he slept and lit it. James Hughes burned to death at his ex-wife's home in Dansville, Mich. Mrs. Hughes pleaded temporary insanity and self-defense when charged with first degree murder.

Last week a jury of ten women and two men found Mrs. Hughes innocent by reason of insanity. She will probably go free after a post-trial psychiatric evaluation.

The judge who presided at the trial said the verdict is a signal that battered women are "crying for help." He said the decision may "turn up a little fire under this fog to enunciate to the world that there is a problem here."

Obviously the case speaks forcefully of the problem of battered women. Tidal waves of sympathy accrue to Mrs. Hughes and other women held hostage by the cruelty or mental illness of their spouses. But that is not the point to which we speak.

Feminists had rallied behind Mrs. Hughes, established a defense fund for her, and had voiced hopes that a simple acquittal verdict would have spoken more clearly in behalf of women's rights. In that regard, the Hughes case was similar to that of Joanne Little, the young black woman whose self-defense plea was successful in her murder trial on charges she killed a white jailer who she said was forcing her into a sexual act. But in the latter case, the threat to the defendant was more immediate. In the case of Mrs. Hughes, it would appear that her act of setting fire to her ex-husband when he was sleeping was a delayed response, with less immediate provocation, to years of abuse. The differences in the cases post obvious legal questions.

Concern is prompted by the extent to which these cases — especially the latter with its resulting verdict of qualified acquittal — have been and may be exploited in the controversy over rights.

The judge was right in stating that the tragedy of Mrs. Hughes' life and her resulting acquittal should signal to the world that battered women are crying for help.

But if the vindication of Mrs. Hughes' response is widely seen as an invitation to vent one's frustrations and fears with impunity, the results will cut across the grain of our society's system of justice and could jeopardize untold numbers of people, the innocent as well as the guilty.

Taking the law into one's own hands has not been seen as acceptable conduct as our civilization has progressed. Is turning back the clock really desirable?

It costs too much already

Maybe Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal believes in the Easter Bunny, too.

Blumenthal said this last weekend that chances are good the oil exporting countries won't raise their prices for another year. Blumenthal had tried to convince the exporting countries that they would hurt themselves if they increase prices when they meet in Venezuela later this year.

But there seems to be little basis for Blumenthal's optimism.

The educated guess is that the producing countries will raise the price by as much as they think the importing nations can bear without collapsing — tempered perhaps by political considerations such as pressure on influential exporting nations by the U.S. But there seems to be little question that some sort of increase will be approved.

The important thing is that Americans not dwell on what the OPEC countries might or might not do, although what they do obviously will have impact on the U.S. and more so on other western industrial nations. Our focus, however, should not be on what our dependence on oil imports will cost us, but on how to reduce that dependence. It is already costing us far too much.

Which oath to honor?

Marquis Childs

Washington — The case of Richard Helms far exceeds in its meaning for the future the fate of one individual. This is said with full realization of the miserable lot that Helms has endured while he has been left hanging in the air during the prolonged consideration before a federal grand jury of the charge of perjury in replying to questions by a Senate panel.

The issue, in the opinion of this observer, is hardly less than whether it is possible to conduct a covert intelligence operation in an open and free society such as ours. In two appearances, first on his appointment as ambassador to Iran and second to be questioned on Chile, Helms was trying to steer a course between two extremes.

On the one hand was the oath he had taken in the CIA not to disclose intelligence secrets. On the other hand was his oath before the committee to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. The government charged that he had failed to answer the questions on Chile "fully, completely and accurately as required by law."

Powerful forces were brought to bear on President Carter to prevent an indictment's being returned. The pressure came from men who felt deeply about the injustice being done to Helms as he was caught between the two obligations. Among them were associates who had watched his career at close range. Three weeks ago this pressure brought assurance from the White House of what was thought to be at least a postponement of an indictment.

Another motive was the concern over the damage that a trial following an indictment could do. Both the government, in presenting its case, and Helms, in his defense, would have had to disclose a raft of secret information. Individuals, among them former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, would have been involved and possibly also subject to the charge of perjury.

To avoid all this, Helms was allowed to plead "no contest" with the approval of Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell and President Carter. Although the long suspense had ended, Helms is still subject to a one-year prison term and a fine by a federal judge who would not go along with the plea bargaining.

The wild excesses of the CIA — assassination attempts, poison cigars, the absurd behavior of certain of the Watergate conspirators — were brought to light in a Senate investigation that went on for many months. This was clear evidence that, allowed to go unchecked, the CIA was capable of mischief seriously damaging America's position in the world.

And the agency was unchecked. The Senate oversight committee was a joke. Headed by Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi, the committee was told just as much as the CIA believed it should know. Frozen in the concrete of his armed services chairmanship, Stennis at the age of 76 had only a dim notion of what the intelligence operation was all about.

At least two-thirds of the CIA operation has nothing to do with the covert or so-called Dirty Tricks Department. It is an intelligence-gathering agency and over the years it has enlisted top-flight analysts. Their intelligence estimates have repeatedly proved to be superior to those of other intelligence-gathering agencies including the military.

In view of the battering CIA has taken, the current director, Adm. Stansfield Turner, has his work cut out for him. Morale is said to be low within the organization and Turner's spit-and-polish approach, bringing in young naval officers as his principal adjutants, has not helped it.

The Helms case could serve a useful purpose. It is painfully instructive, in the dilemma of the CIA official faced with breaking the oath he took to guard the secrets of his agency. A formula could become accepted in answering the kind of questions put to Helms by the Senate committee. Perhaps like this: "I regret that I cannot respond because of the pledge I gave under oath when I became an official of the Central Intelligence Agency."

Sen. Stuart Symington, who put the questions about Chile, says now that he would have accepted that kind of answer. Whether the whole committee would have is another matter.

When word of Helms' plea-bargaining became known, the chairman of the Senate intelligence investigating committee, Sen. Frank Church of Idaho, said he thought there was to be an end to the double standard of justice for "big shots." That was a cheap shot unworthy of one aho had every reason to know the stresses and strains of an intelligence organization in a democratic society.

No free lunch

Jack Germond
Jules Witcover

Washington — Whatever its final terms, the new Social Security tax bill is a political time bomb. The impact probably will not be felt in next year's congressional elections, which is no accident, but it surely will be felt in the 1980 campaign.

Politicians, and particularly Democratic politicians, will tell you that the payroll taxes already being levied evoke more resentment among working class voters than any other, for the obvious reason that they already amount to more than many hourly workers are obliged to pay in either federal or state income taxes. For those in a slightly higher bracket, the Social Security taxes are noxious because they cannot be offset by deductions.

And either of the two conflicting approaches being taken by the House and Senate would make the sting noticeably sharper in 1979. Under the House formula, for example, the employe earning $20,000 a year would be liable for more than $200 a year above the $965 now deducted from his wages.

What is so vexing to the politicians in Congress, however, is that this is one of those situations where there is no politically palatable escape.

There is some logic, for example, in the argument that some quirks of the formula allow benefits to reach excessive levels. And that would seem to dictate a thorough review with an eye to cutting down the obligations against the fund in the future. But politicians who love to have their pictures taken accepting a presidential pen when benefit increases are voted cannot be expected to seize on that alternative. Everyone knows the olds folks vote in large numbers.

The Senate approach seeks to minimize the impact — in raw numbers of voters, at least — by putting more of the load on employers than on employes, thus breaking the tradition that has existed since 1935 of an equal burden on employer and employe.

The tax is now levied against both at the rate of 5.85% on the first $16,500 of annual earnings. The Senate version would require employers to pay on a base up to $50,000 between 1979 and 1984, then raise it to the first $75,000 thereafter. The base on which employes would pay would rise to $19,500 in 1979, $21,000 in 1980 and $30,300 in 1985, but would not reach the $75,000 level until some time after 2000 — long after our present crop of politicians would be past worrying about such things. The theory is that soaking the employer is more bearable because he can deduct what he pays in Social Security taxes from his earnings and thus get some of it back — about half for big corporations — in reduced income taxes.

But there are a lot of holes in that argument, too. For one thing, it is obvious that employers are going to pass the added costs on to their customers, which is inflationary. And it is equally obvious that in some marginal cases, the higher tax requirement is going to discourage employers from providing more and higher-paying jobs, which does not help solve the unemployment problem.

What all this leads to, inevitably, is the notion of dipping into general tax revenues and abandoning the myth, which is all it is now, that this is a simple insurance program in which folks get out what they pay in. Thus, the Carter administration suggested early in the game that a formula be written to use general funds when unemployment reached such a level that payroll taxes were not meeting actuarial requirements.

But both the House and Senate have thrown up their hands at that idea, arguing among other things that it would convert Social Security from an insurance program to another form of "welfare" payment. What is just as much involved, however, is the fear in Congress that once that door is opened, it never will be closed. In other words, the politicians on the Hill are making it clear they have little faith in the good intentions of those who will come after them, which may be realistic if uncharitable.

Meanwhile, President Carter has been suggesting that he would try to compensate for whatever damage is done to the taxpayers in payroll taxes by promulgating offsetting reductions in regular income taxes. But that is one of those things that sounds better in theory than it is likely to be in practice. Writing tax bills, particularly under the political pressures that are certain to prevail over the next three years, is a tricky business.

So the likely result is an increase in payroll taxes that no one is going to enjoy — and another demonstration of an old rule of politics: There's no such thing as a free lunch.

Stagnation cost

New York — Unemployment rose again last month, from 6.9 to 7%. But back in 1956, with the Eisenhower administration in office and about to be re-elected, unemployment in America averaged only 4.1%. Had that rate been maintained during the last two decades:

—Production of goods and services would have risen by a total of $2.3 trillion, measured in 1976 dollars.

—In 1976 alone, the equivalent of 17% of that year's actual production would have been added to the Gross National Product.

During roughly the same period (1959-1976), most European unemployment rates (adjusted to U.S. measurement concepts) were far below the U.S. average of 5.3%; France averaged 2.5%, Sweden 1.9%, West Germany 1.2%. Japan averaged 1.4%. Had American unemployment been reduced to these ranges for the period 1956-1976:

—Production of goods and services in the U.S. would have risen by a staggering total of $3.8 trillion, in 1976 dollars.

—Federal tax revenues in the same two decades would have increased by $750 billion.

—In 1976 alone, federal tax revenues would have been almost $100 billion more than they were at the actual 7% unemployment rate.

All these calculations have been made by Steven Sheffrin, an economist at the University of California at Davis, in a study prepared for the Washington-based Exploratory Project for Economic Alternatives. In an introduction to the study, the project's co-directors, Gar Alperovitz and Jeff Faux, point out how that extra $100 billion in 1976 revenues might have been used:

Anti-poverty programs — $16 billion; raising the rate of public anti-pollution spending to $18 billion a year, with a view to cleaning up the environment by 1985; establishing complete national health insurance, at $64 billion a year.

In their view, the national debate has been illogically focused on "how high an unemployment rate we must accept, rather than on how low a rate we could achieve were we to make it our priority." And they recall that as late as 1959, a Bureau of Labor Statistics study found that with allowances for those only briefly or seasonally out of work "full employment" would be reached at a 2.1% unemployment rate.

Further BLS studies have shown only a small rise in that estimate, to 2.5% in the 1967-75 period.

But as unemployment began to rise in the late '50s, presidential definitions of "full employment" did, too — for example, the Kennedy administration's "interim goal" of 4% in 1962. The Nixon administration still had a target of 3.8% in 1970, but by 1973 a stagnant economy had pushed that up to 4.9%. Under President Ford, the "full employment" level was thought to be "perhaps closer to 5.5%." Jimmy Carter, who began his campaign in 1975 calling for 2% unemployment, has set his presidential goals at 5.2% in 1980 and 4.8% in 1981.

This upward trend in the full-employment definition reflected, to some extent, the increased presence of women and youths in the work force — but Alperovitz and Faux believe it also resulted from changing political and economic conditions, particularly the surge of inflation owing to the Vietnam war, worldwide oil and food price increases and other economic "jolts." Now, they argue, the definition of "full employment" is more nearly set by the fear of inflation than by the capacity of the economy.

They contend that if an effective attack were launched on inflation — particularly in energy, food, health and housing costs — by means other than high unemployment, the federal government could make a realistic commitment to "full employment" — say, 2.5 or 3% unemployment — then take the necessary steps to bring it about through something like the Humphrey-Hawkins bill. Sheffrin's study suggests the enormous benefits such a policy could yield.

The GOP and the trend to the right

Kevin Phillips

Washington — Now that the "trend to the right" in the United States has become notable enough to impress itself even on the Manhattan-bound editors of Newsweek, serious commentators should be asking this very serious question: Why is it that the United States can simultaneously witness an ideological trend to the right and a further reduction of Republican Party identification (now down to 20% in the polls)?

If is enough, one would think, to perplex and intrigue the entire Republican National Committee and the entire American Political Science Association.

Let me begin by offering a central, fundamental hypothesis: The current trend is a substantially different type of conservatism than that being offered by the Republican Party.

Several explanations are relevant. First, as Congressman Morris Udall points out, a lot of the new self-identification with "conservatism" is based not on enthusiasm for traditional conservative ideas but on hostility towards the entrenched Washington liberal Establishment.

Second, there is a Niagara Falls of poll evidence to suggest that the major appeal of U.S. conservatism is essentially cultural—on issues like busing, quotas, pornography and nationalism (keeping the Panama Canal). To be sure, anger over taxation and inflation is also important. And so is generalized opposition to big government. Yet at the same time, it's clear that the average American voter likes what has been called the middle-class pork barrel — housing programs, aid to education, Medicare, highway aid, and so forth. Desire to cut back federal programs simply does not extend so far across the board as old-style conservatives think. Most of the public's negativism focuses on culturally controversial outlays like welfare and urban aid.

Morris Udall
. . . a hostility theory

Lastly, for all their hostility to rising taxes and inflation, the American people still want a government that takes an activist view of the economy — protecting U.S. industries and (most of all) fighting unemployment.

Therein lies the rub. However these descriptions might have matched the newly Middle-Americanized Republicanism taking pre-Watergate shape in 1972, they do not snugly fit the present GOP creed of Sen. Howard Baker, Rep. John Rhodes and National Chairman Bill Brock. In fact, it's arguable that the national GOP has actually been moving at odds with the U.S. trend to the right. For example, Messrs. Baker, Rhodes and Brock have privately striven to keep the Republican Party from vocally embracing the popular position on key issues like busing, quotas and the Panama Canal. As for Gerald Ford, his former pollster, Robert Teeter, admitted this winter that GOP strategists had been stunned in mid-1976 when their surveys showed that Americans had come to categorize Ford as a liberal in social policy. Moreover, Ford wilfully discarded yet another critical pivot of the new conservative appeal — antagonism to Washington.

As for economics, GOP conservatism — fairly or not — is seen based on concern for profits, not people. Voters may agree with conservative principles on taxation and inflation, but they like to feel that these platforms were hammered out in town meetings, not corporate board meetings. Lastly, surveys suggest that the average American wants the traditional GOP conservative approach to inflation and taxation diluted with more willingness to use government power to solve economic problems, especially unemployment.

All in all, then, the U.S. "trend to the right" has in considerable measure bypassed a GOP that does not relate to its new dynamics. Too much of the current national Republican posture is an ineffective mix of downtown club conservative economics and League of Women Voters cultural liberalism (chic sloganry about recruiting blacks, women, youth and so forth). That's not what the country wants.

Consequently, via this 1974-77 misperception of the electorate, the national GOP leadership has helped to create an opening for what may now be the fastest-growing political force in the United States — the much-heralded New Right. Judging by their rhetoric, the New Right mixes a strong populist-conservatism on issues like busing, quotas and Panama with middle-class economics, including criticism of both big business and big labor. If that blend of populism, conservatism and anti-Washington politics has prospered, that's probably because it reflects the odd ideological cross currents now being described as "America's shift to the right."

Jury ready for Beers' trial

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Nebraska City — After a full day devoted to selecting a jury, the first-degree murder trial of Robert Beers was ready for opening arguments Tuesday morning.

The 39-year-old local salvage dealer, accused of the July 9 shotgun slaying of the Nebraska City policeman and wounding of another, will face a jury of three men and nine women. Indications are that a week might be required to present testimony in the case.

Otoe County Attorney William F. Davis has filed a list of 59 potential witnesses, although it is unlikely that all will be called. Court-appointed defense attorneys are Richard Hoch and John Steinheider.

Hoch indicated that the defendant, who sat calmly by his counsel through the tedious jury selection, probably will take the stand in his own behalf. Thin and neatly dressed, Beers listened intently as District Judge Raymond Case painstakingly directed the examination of the panel.

Despite attorneys' frequent references to widespread publicity given the case, only two persons were excused from jury service for admitting to "preconceived opinions," two for being acquainted with principals in the case and one for being opposed to capital punishment.

Hock carefully quizzed panel members on whether they had been influenced by media coverage of what he termed "a sensational case." While most persons acknowledged exposure to news accounts, they insisted they could still serve "fairly and impartially."

A number of these individuals, however, were among the 21 receiving peremptory (no cause required) challenges. A total of 46 persons were questioned in choosing the 12 jurors and one alternate.

The questioning of the panel also seemed to bear out the defendant's own contention that he could receive a fair trial in his home community. Although his attorneys had earlier tried to obtain a change of venue, Beers had refused to go along and the request was dropped.

Beers spent all of Monday, incidentally, just across the counsel table from one of the policemen he is alleged to have shot in the July incident. Pete Rishel, 22, seated with court officials because he is a principal in the case, was seriously wounded and has yet to return to active police duty. He was, however, dressed in police uniform.

The murder charge stemmed from the death of the other officer. Gary White, 24. Beers also faces a felony charge of shooting Rishel with intent to kill, wound or maim.

Judge Case repeatedly reminded the jury panel that the only two penalties for first-degree murder are death or life imprisonment. The possibility was also mentioned, however, of conviction on second-degree murder or manslaughter.

Details which emerged at the time of the shootings indicated the officers were shot just outside the Nebraska City police station. Beers was arrested about six hours later at an Interstate 80 rest stop near York. He pleaded innocent when later arraigned.

Nebraska, Kansas Interstate linked

Wallace (AP) — Interstate 70 in Kansas and Interstate 80 in Nebraska were linked Monday night by a new 25-mile segment of Highway 25.

Taking part in the dedication were persons representing the communities of Colby and Atwood, Kan., and Trenton, Palisade, Wallace, Sutherland, McCook and North Platte, Neb.

Les O'Donnell, Nebraska district highway engineer, said the blacktop road extended 15.5 miles northwest of Hayes Center.

After the ribbon-cutting ceremony, a spokesman for the Highway 25 Association said a 35-minute slide presentation was made in Wallace entitled, "Highway 25 Country."

Omaha teens won't face adult charges

Omaha (UPI) — Deputy Douglas County Attorney Tom Brown said Monday no adult charges would be filed against four Omaha teen-agers, including one shot by a police officer, following an auto theft and three purse snatch incidents.

Brown said the four would be turned over to juvenile authorities for further action following their arrests Sunday.

Police said two 15-year-olds were arrested at Immanuel Hospital where they had gone to obtain treatment for one, who suffered a minor gunshot wound from a .38-caliber revolver fired by police officer Larry Lutton.

Lutton said he began chasing a car containing the four when he recognized the vehicle as matching a description of one reportedly driven by suspects involved in three Saturday purse snatches.

Lutton said chase reached speeds of 90 miles per hour before the youths stopped the car and jumped out. Lutton said he fired his revolver twice when one of the youths approached him in a crouched position.

A third 15-year-old was arrested at the scene while another, age 14, was arrested at his home a short time later.

Police said the vehicle in which the suspects were riding was stolen Friday night.

Do you dream of being slender?

Dream no longer. Linda Hague is just one example of how Weight Loss Clinic™ turns dreams into reality.

"The day I joined Weight Loss Clinic was the day my life began changing. For years I felt that it was impossible for me to ever lose weight. I lived with depression and hatred for myself, and at the same time growing larger and larger until I was sick with feelings of insecurity and selfconsciousness. My mother found an advertisement about the Weight Loss Clinic and asked me if I would like to go in and learn about their program. Knowing that I needed help badly, I made my appointment for a free consultation. I joined the program and since then, each day the clinic has shown me their concern and desire to help me make myself the slender woman that I'd always wanted to be. They shared with me their enthusiasm and excitement as we watched seventy pounds drop off.

"Without the guidance and concern that Weight Loss Clinic showed me I would still be overweight today. They helped turn my impossible dream into reality. Now I can really feel the happiness and satisfaction of being a slender woman."

Linda Hague

Linda is just one of the many success stories at Weight Loss Clinic™. We've helped tens of thousands of overweight individuals throughout the country. Clients lose 10, 20, 40 pounds . . . even more . . . often in just a matter of weeks. And without fad diets, harmful drugs, or strenuous exercises. Once your goal is reached, we'll give you the skills you need to remain at your new, lean weight indefinitely.

You no longer have to dream about losing weight. Call now for your free consultation visit — no obligation, of course.

Exon won't appoint 4th high court judge

Associated Press

When Harry Spencer of Lincoln retires as a Nebraska Supreme Court judge, 14 months from now, Gov. J. James Exon apparently will bypass an opportunity to become the first governor to have appointed a majority of sitting judges on the high court.

Exon could get the mark by naming Spencer's replacement prior to the end of the gubernatorial term in January 1979.

"Ill most likely allow my successor to appoint the successor to Judge Spencer," because "it is not in the best interests of the judiciary for someone leaving office to do that," Exon said. The judges "will be around dispensing justice long after I'm gone," he said.

Three Supreme Court judges are Exon appointees, Lawrence Clinton was named in 1971, Donald Brodkay in 1974 and C. Thomas White this year. Chief Justice Paul White was elected to the court in 1962, Spencer and Leslie Boslaugh were elected in 1960 and Hale McCown was appointed by Gov. Frank Morrison in 1967.

Regardless of who eventually picks Spencer's successor, it is being speculated in some circles that Lancaster County District Judges William Hastings and Dale Fahrnbruch would be the principal contenders and that both men are interested in the job.

Both men said it was premature to speculate. Both are Republicans. Fahrnbruch was appointed by Exon in 1972 and Hastings was appointed by Morrison in 1965.

Having already picked more high court judges than any of his predecessors, Exon also holds the record of selecting more judges at all levels than any Nebraska governor.

That is because Exon has been governor longer than anyone else, and the merit system for choosing judges was expanded to cover all the state's courts during Exon's tenur.

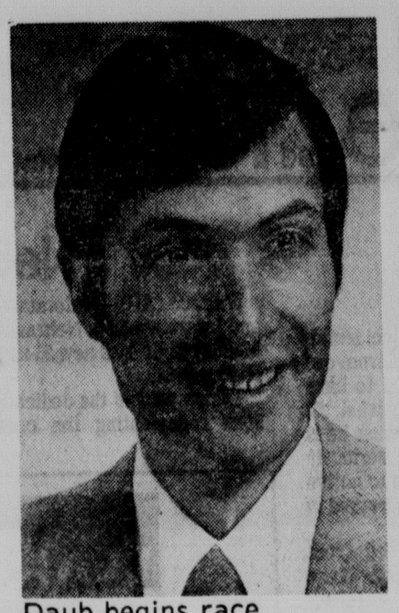

Under the plan, a bipartisan nominating commission submits the names of two or more qualified applicants for vacancies to the governor, who makes the final selection.

Even the Republican author of the Court Reform Act has no complaints with Exon's tendency to select Democrats for judicial posts.

Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke said that when a Republican nominee for a judgeship is more qualified than a Democrat, Exon chooses the Republican.

In 1970, Exon said he would "essentially appoint registered Democrats to most of the key spots" in government, and for the most part, he has. Fifteen of the 65 judges he has named belong to the GOP and three are independents.

Exon said he has always regarded making judicial appointments as "one of the most important things I do," and that the nominating commissions have offered him "excellent choices in almost all instances."

Daub begins race

Daub congressional candidate

Omaha (AP) — Hal Daub, former Douglas County Republican chairman, announced Monday he will seek the GOP nomination for Congress from the 2nd District.

Daub, 36, told a news conference he was making the announcement one year ahead of election day to give voters time enough "to become acquainted with me and the common sense way I would represent their interests."

"I wasn't born into a political family and the name Daub is certainly not a household word," said Daub, the county GOP chairman from 1974 to 1977.

Daub was a member of the GOP Central Committee, served as state parliamentarian and was junior president of the 1971 Republican Founders Day.

"Many civic, business and volunteer commitments have given me a deep appreciation for the achievements and problems of the people of the 2nd District," he said.

Voters "can no longer put up with the Washington effect on their lives . . . I am referring to the worries we all have about energy and environment and here in Nebraska we're particularly concerned about water resources," Daub said.

He said he also is aware of older citizens' concerns about inflation, wage earners worried about increasing taxes, unemployed young persons, "farmers and ranchers facing a shrinking return for their efforts and families frustrated by an increasing grocery budget."

Daub is vice president, general counsel and credit manager for Standard Chemical Manufacturing Co. He is a graduate of Washington University in St. Louis and the University of Nebraska-Lincoln law school.

Rep. John Cavanaugh, D-Neb., now holds the 2nd District seat. Elected in 1976, Cavanaugh was the first Democrat to win the seat since 1948.

Daub described the 1976 victories by Cavanaugh and Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., as accidental. He said they were more "matters of personality" than flaws in the GOP party organization.

He criticized Cavanaugh's voting record on several issues, including aid and trade to Vietnam and Cuba, increased spending in the face of a $61 billion federal deficit, the B-1 bomber and "benefits to those who served less than honorably in Vietnam."

16% tax rate not mentioned in report

The possibility of reducing the state income tax rate from 18 percent to 16 percent of the federal liability appears to have been a last-minute determination by Gov. J. James Exon.

In the report prepared for the Nov. 15 meeting of the five-member Board of Equalization, the 16 percent rate is not mentioned. The Revenue Department report offers only the option of dropping the income tax rate from 18 to 17 percent.

A supplement with estimates on revenues at the lower rate will not be ready until later this week, said Tax Commissioner William Peters.

Exon and Peters said last week they thought a two-point decrease in the income tax rate is possible because of strong tax receipts during the first four months of this fiscal year. Revenues have run $8.6 million over projections.

The treasury balance was also $5 million more than expected at the end of the last fiscal year.

Before their press conference last week, Exon and Peters said a reduction to 17 percent was all that could be expected along with a drop in the sales tax rate from 3.5 percent to 3 percent.

The sales tax rate reduction is justified because a state aid to education referendum effort has blocked a $20 million increase in state spending to schools.

Despite the better-than-projected revenues for this year, the Revenue Department remained cautious about the growth of the state's economy. The report makes no alteration in the revenue projections issued last June.

"The continued uncertainty of Nebraska farm economy cautions us to leave our forecast of June 13 unchanged," the report said. Another reason is the only slight change in national economic projections used by the state to estimate Nebraska's economic performance.

A 5 percent jump in farm income is projected for the year. Much of this increase comes from the "$5.1 billion in government payments to farmers," the report said.

If the Board of Equalization chooses to set the rates at 3 percent on sales and 17 percent of the federal income tax, it would leave a $31 million balance, if all appropriations are spent, on June 30, 1978. A cushion of 3 percent to 7 percent is required in the rate setting formula.

Exon has said the cushion, sometimes called an overlevy, should be at the higher end of the scale because of cash flow problems during the last two years.

The report also notes that total spending for the year will be nearly $494 billion with anticipated receipts topping $524 million.

Percentage of tenured faculty at NU drops in recent years

The percentage of tenured faculty at the University of Nebraska has dropped steadily over the past three years, according to a report to NU Regents.

Only the Medical Center showed an increase in the tenured faculty percentage compared to last year, and all three campuses' tenure percentages were lower than in 1975, according to the report, prepared for the Regents' 1:30 p.m. Friday meeting at Regents Hall.

System-wide tenure percentages dropped from 64.5% in 1975 to 60.6% this year. The tenure percentage includes both staff members on tenure and those likely to be tenured soon.

This year there are 1,219 university staff members already in the tenure system and 794 nearing tenure, compared to 1,245 tenured in 1975 and 686 nearing tenure.

In fact, the tenure and near-tenure numbers for all three campuses show declining numbers of tenured faculty and increasing numbers of faculty members nearing tenure.

The UNL tenure report shows a decrease from 73.7% tenured or nearing tenure in 1975 to 68.6% this year. UNO's tenure percentage has gone from 61% in 1975 to 58.8% this year.

Medical Center tenure percentages dropped from 39.8% in 1975 to 36.5% in 1976, then rose to 37.4% this year.

Tenure critics call the practice guaranteed re-employment after a probationary period. They say tenure makes employment practices less flexible.

Supporters of tenure say poor professors still can be removed and tenure helps insure academic feedom.

Regents will also consider an appeal procedure for nominations to the graduate faculty during the Friday meeting and a proposed bylaws amendment which would assure reporting of graduate college activities to the appropriate chancellor and system vice president for academic affairs.

Graduate faculty members of the university-wide system complained earlier this year of poor communication between faculty and administrators of the university-wide graduate college.

Other items on the Regents' agenda include the following:

— Reorganization of the Barkley Memorial Center for Speech and Hearing Problems to improve communication among the four departments.

— Approve almost $883,000 to improve UNL residence halls, Nebraska Union and University Health Center and $30,000 to meet fire and life safety modifications of Terrace Hall, now used by Tau Kappa Epsilon Fraternity.

— Approve beginning plans for remodeling of the 71-year-old Temple Building, used by the UNL theatre arts department.

Average state employee's salary ranks 40th

The average salary for state employees is 15.8 percent below the average paid to state employees across the nation, the Nebraska Association of Public Employees stated.

According to figures drived from a survey conducted by the Bureau of the Census in the U.S. Department of Commerce, Nebraska ranks 40th among the states in terms of average state employee salary.

The average salary for state employees in Nebraska during 1976 was $843 per month compared to a national average of $976, according to NAPE Executive Director Roger Schulz.

Nebraska ranked 50th among the states in terms of average monthly earnings for full-time state employees in educational facilities, excluding instructional staff.

But the state's per capita income and Nebraska's number of full-time state employees per 10,000 population ranked in the middle of all states, Schulz noted.

Nebraska was 26th among the states in its per capita income of $6,240 and 27th in number of state employees per 10,000 people.

The statistics support NAPE's position that the state should grant its employees "a minimum salary increase of no less than 8% and develop a pay plan that over a period of time will start moving people up through the system to make the state more competitive in salaries," Schulz said.

The data also shows why the state has been experiencing turnover rates between 25 percent and 30 percent during recent years, he said. That turnover rate is "increasing annually," he said.

The average monthly earning for state employees in educational facilities, excluding instructional staff, was pegged at $561 or $45 below the 49th ranking state, Tennessee, and far below the $891 average for all states.

"These reports dispel a common belief of some citizens who indicate that Nebraska state employees are well paid and are more than competitive with employees in the private sector," Schulz said.

Track abandonment brings appeal call

Associated Press

An initial decision allowing the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad to abandon some 172 miles of track between Norfolk and Winner, S.D., should be appealed, State Sen. Keith Boughn said Monday.

The Norfolk lawmaker said Administrative Law Judge Richard H. Beddow of the Interstate Commerce Commission issued a decision saying the railroad could abandon the track, which runs through Pierce, Madison, Antelope, Knox, and Boyd counties in Nebraska and through Gregory and Tripp counties in South Dakota.

"I was kind of shocked by the decision," said Boughn, who had helped lead protests against the proposed abandonment. "I want to meet with the governor and with the Public Service Commission to discuss what we can do next — I believe we have 30 days to appeal."

Hearings on the proposed abandonment were held in Norfolk and Winner last July.

Boughn said the Nebraska and South Dakota Public Service Commissioners opposed the abandonment as did Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon and the attorney general of South Dakota.

"It is my hope that something can be done as quickly as possible to take steps to avoid this abandonment," Boughn said.

Thone complains about waste

Associated Press

Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., says it appears creation of the Department of Energy amounts to creation of a federal agency to waste energy.

"One of the Department of Energy's first actions was to throw some defense agencies out of their offices in downtown Washington," Thone said.

"The federal goernment — which usually underestimates costs — predicts that it will take $17 million to fix up these offices for the Department of Energy and to relocate the other agencies," Thone said. said.

"Who knows how many tankers full of Arabian oil would be required to supply the energy that will be wasted on this move?" he asked.

Thone said energy is "a hot topic" with President Carter and he quoted others who are saying that is why the new department is getting the downtown building.

Holdrege man accuses sheriff of slander

Holdrege (AP) — A Holdrege man who claims Phelps County Sheriff Dwayne Newman slandered him is seeking $60,000 in damages.

The slander suit has been filed in Phelps County District Court on behalf of Daniel D. Erion of Holdrege.

Thomas Ferneau, a Bertrand attorney, filed the petition against Newman, both as sheriff and as an individual, and Phelps County.

Erion claims Newman made a malicious statement. Erion said Newman accused Erion of burning down his own house a year ago, and said the statement damaged his livelihood.

After the fire, there were arson charges filed against Mrs. Galen Ferdinand of Holdrege.

Price guaranteed

Washington (UPI) — Passengers are guaranteed the price of domestic air fares when tickets were purchased even if fares are raised before tickets are used, according to a new ruling by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Juelfs says gasohol not feasible now

Stan Juelfs, a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, Monday said gasohol is economically unfeasible at present, but research and development should continue for alternative uses for agricultural commodities.

"People who say gasohol is economically feasible do not understand the process of alcohol production in massive amounts, Juelfs said in a prepared news release.

He said the spread between the cost of retail gasoline and the cost of alcohol production does not at present warrant extensive use of gasohol, a blend of unleaded gasoline and grain alcohol.

"The cost of plants, raw material, labor and associated expenses would exceed current gasoline prices, but eventually this situation should change," Juelfs said.

"The thought behind gasohol represents good reasoning and clear thinking," he said. "But we must not limit ourselves to the development of one product."

Juelfs said other alternatives for utilizing grain may be vegetable oil-based products for industrial use and broadened human consumption.

Bergland to talk at farm meeting

Sioux City, Iowa (AP) — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Robert Bergland has a perfect forum Wednesday to announce a feed grain set-aside plan when he addresses the second annual Midwestern Conference on Food and Social Policy.

Bergland has said he will make a decision on a set-aside by Nov. 15. An earlier expected announcement was postponed when it was learned the Soviet Union will buy more U.S. corn.

The three-day conference begins Tuesday and features 13 sessions populated with nationally prominent scholars, policy makers and food producers. It is designed to examine America's food systems and policies.

Bergland is scheduled to speak Wednesday night on the 1977 farm bill and its implications for domestic farm policy. Afterwards, he will answer questions from a panel made up primarily of agriculture journalists and moderated by Nebraska Gov. J. James Exon.

The panelists will be Rudolf Schnasse, managing editor of Ag World magazine in St. Paul, Minn.; Don Muhm, farm editor of the Des Moines Register; Don Ringler, farm writer of the Omaha World-Herald, and Dr. James Whitaker, associate professor of history at Iowa State University in Ames.

Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, will talk Tuesday night on the impact of America's agricultural policy abroad.

Allan Grant, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, will discuss the relationship between consumers and producers on Wednesday afternoon.

And. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., will speak Thursday afternoon on how to balance governmental intervention in agriculture with the free market system.

Regulations opposed

Grand Island (UPI) — The city of Grand Island has filed objections to proposed federal Department of Housing and Urban Development regulations dealing with the use of community development block grant funds.

City Manager Earl Ahlschwede said Monday he felt there was "too much red tape involved" with the grants.

Honorary degrees due

Kansas City — The honorary American Farmer Degree will be presented to Harold Johns, vocational agricultural instructor at Rock County High School, Bassett, Neb., and Prof. U. E. Wendorff, University of Nebraska-Lincoln professor of agricultural engineering, at the national Future Farmers of America convention in Kansas City this week.

Johns has taught 29 years at the Rock County High School. Wendorff taught vocational agriculture in Broken Bow and Tecumseh for 12 years, was assistant state supervisor two years and a teacher educator of vocational agriculture education at UNL 26 years.

Zorinsky gets lesson

Omaha (AP) — U.S. Sen. Edward Zorinsky got a lesson in sausage making from a merchant irked by a remark the senator made about the meat. Aided by Rudy Stoysich of Stoysich House of Sausage, Zorinsky turned out professional-looking links on his first try.

In a recent interview, Zorinsky remarked, "Somebody told me at one time there were two things you don't want to see being made: sausage and laws."

Dairymen recognition set

Top Nebraska dairy cattle and their owners will be recognized at a noon luncheon at the new Nebraska East Union here Nov. 23, according to Phil Cole, Extension dairyman at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

He said 34 dairymen will receive Silver Plaque and Silver Bar awards which are based upon a five-year production average of 460 pounds of butterfat or more.

New dryer planned

Grand Island (UPI) — The manager of the Farmers Union Cooperative Elevator in Grand Island said Monday the firm planned to install a new grain dryer before the 1978 harvest season to comply with state Department of Environmental Control regulations.

Pork college set

Blair — A pork production college for producers under 30 years old will be conducted Dec. 12-14 at Dana College,

The three-day college, sponsored by the University's Cooperative Extension Service, will emphasize nutrition, selection, breeding and health programs for sows, breeding herds and nursery pigs, he said.

Nebraska harvest mostly in last stage

The fall harvest moved into its final stages in most areas of Nebraska over the past week.

Wet fields and limited storage capacity continue to pose some problems, the Nebraska Crop Reporting Service said Monday in its weekly crop-weather report.

Topsoil moisture supplies are now rated adequate or surplus in 75 percent of the counties and short in the remaining 25 percent. Subsoil moisture is rated adequate in 85 percent and short in 15 percent of the counties.

Corn harvest in the state is now over 80 percent completed, a few days behind last year when 85 percent had been harvested, the service saiid.

Grain sorghum harvest was 85 percent completed by the weekend, which is normal progress to date, according to the service.

Soybean harvest is over 85 percent completed, somewhat behind last year's nearly complete status at this time.

Sugar beet harvest is nearly completed as a result of near-ideal weather, the report revealed.

Winter wheat condition declined slightly with 19 percent rated fair, 66 percent good and 15 percent excellent.

Carter speech delayed on TV

President Carter's energy address will be broadcast at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday by the Nebraska Educational Television Network.

The 90-minute delayed broadcast will be followed by an analysis of the statement and its impact.

Gasoline prices in Nebraska hit new average—63.3 cents

Omaha (AP) — The price of gasoline in Nebraska has reached the highest average ever posted — 63.3 cents per gallon for regular, according to the AAA Cornhusker Motor Club.

The club said that the high prices come at the approach of winter, when gasoline prices historically have dropped.

The club's early November survey of 196 service stations noted that the current price is four-tenths of one cent per gallon higher than the old record, set in early September.

One year ago, the club's survey found regular selling for an average of 60.0 cents. Club spokesman Barc Wade said one cent of the difference is attributed to the additional one cent gasoline tax increase that took effect Aug. 1.

Users of no-lead gasoline were paying an average of 66.5 cents per gallon, while premium buyers were shelling out 68.1 cents in the latest survey.

The club survey also found some all-time high prices at individual pumps — 75.9 and 74.9 cent per gallon tags for premium gasoline at two Lincoln stations.

Several stations in Omaha were selling regular at 53.9 cents per gallon, with substantially more stations posting prices of 54.9 to 57.9 for regular.

Lincoln residents were paying the highest price for regular at an average 64.6 cents per gallon, while Omaha had the lowest average at 62.1.

Grand Island motorists were paying 62.6, while in North Platte regular was averaging 63.6. In Scottsbluff the average was 63.0 and in Norfolk it was 63.5.

Since 1973, gasoline prices have climbed about 19 cents per gallon, including the tax increase, Wade said.

"During the last four years, prices have usually made a slow decline after Labor Day, and then resumed an upward trend in the spring," Wade said.

Kansans pick up murder suspect

Wilber (AP) — A 38-year-old man was returned to Kansas Monday to face first degree murder charges in the weekend shooting death of a young Emporia, Kan. man.

Thomas Chappell waived extradition earlier in the day in Saline County Court in Wilber, where he had been held since his arrest Saturday night. He left the court in the custody of two Lyon County, Kan., sheriff's officers.

Chappell and another man were arrested near a Wilber tavern after an all-points bulletin was issued for the car in which they were riding. The second man was released Monday after questioning and on instructions from the Kansas authorities.

The warrant against Chappell charges him in the death of Carl E. Heintzleman Jr., 21, whose body was found Saturday morning in a ditch five miles west of his hometown of Emporia. He had been shot three times in the back, at least twice at close range, with what authorities believe was a .22-caliber weapon.

A spokeswoman for the Lyon County sheriff's office said Chappell and Heintzleman knew each other from working together at carnivals.

Salisbury, Rhodesia (AP) — Black nationalist guerrillas have claimed responsibility for a rocket attack that caused damage estimated at more than $1 million to a luxury resort hotel at Victoria Falls.

2nd quarter retail sales behind rest of economy

The Associated Press

Nebraska's net taxable retail sales during the second quarter this year amounted to more than $1.7 billion, a 16.9 percent increase from the first quarter level on a dollar volume basis.

However, according to the statistics from the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, the second quarter of 1977 figure represents only a 5.5 percent hike from the total in the same quarter a year ago.

And that hike didn't keep pace with the rest of the economy, according to the bureau's report.

"The 5.5 percent rise in retail sales was less than the 6.7 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index, which resulted in a 1.2 percent decline in real retail sales," the bureau said.

Some towns just fade away

By J.L. Schmidt
Star Staff Writer

They're gone now, the Cadmans, the Preys, the Wallingfords, but their memory haunts the rubble that was once Saltillo, a short hop from Lincoln on the old Burlington and Missouri River Railroad.

Gone too are the two saloons, hotel, schoolhouse and doctor's office that once served some 50 people who called Saltillo home.

The town was founded in 1882, or 1862, depending on which historical source one believes.

The grain elevator lasted until 1953, when a Lincoln man dismantled it. The foundation can be located near the old railroad siding sign, still visible at South 27th Street and Saltillo Road, nine miles south of Lincoln, near the entrance to Wilderness Park.

Somewhere under the lush growth of Wilderness Park are 14 streets, streets that once had the popular American names of Oak, Pine and Maple, Frist, Second and Third.

Besides the foundation and the siding sign, a massive stone fireplace and a brick chimney are still visible to park visitors, a reminder of the majesty that was once a part of the lives of Saltillo residents, many of whom were farmers.

Some, it is said, came to the area along Salt Creek in hopes of refining salt for sale in other parts of the country. But that was a dream that never came true.

Others, lilke John Cadman, turned their efforts to building the Steam Wagon Road, an overland route from Nebraska City to Fort Kearny (near Minden). The new route would have taken 40 miles out of the trip which had always been made parallel to the Platte River.

At least part of Saltillo's growth can be attributed to the promise of the road, but the lion's share probably belongs to the railroad and the post office. The Saltillo post office was the first in Lancaster County, established in 1854.

Cadman was one of the early supporters of the move to put the state capitol in Lincoln, a few miles from his palatial Silver Lake Farm. Ironically, that very move may have been part of the demise of Saltillo, as the little town had a hard time competing with a growing city a short hop away.

Historians credit the naming of the town with the Spanish "salto," a hop or a leap, and "saltillo," a short hop. In death, Saltillo joined the likes of Lancaster County towns such as Arbor, Berks, Bernham, Carlos, Cobb, Cushman, Garratt, Hanlon, Jamaica, Pella, Rokeby, Summit and Welch.

Saltillo and the other Lancaster County "ghost towns" joned an estimated 300 towns statewide that bit the dust.

The highly touted steam wagon met a similar fate.

Major Joseph Brown dreamed up the mammoth vehicle and had it built and shipped to Nebraska City in 1862. The road was ready in the spring of the year and July 22 was the date of the inaugural venture.

Six miles outside Nebraska City the belching giant broke down — on a farm owned by J. Sterling Morton. A rod broke and not a blacksmith in the area could fix it, so Brown headed back to New York City for parts.

A Sioux uprising in Minnesota diverted his attention and it wasn't until later in the decade that Brown could turn back to the steam wagon. But it was too late by then. The iron horses of the railroad had won the fight and Midwesterners were traveling on steel rails instead of steam wagon roads.

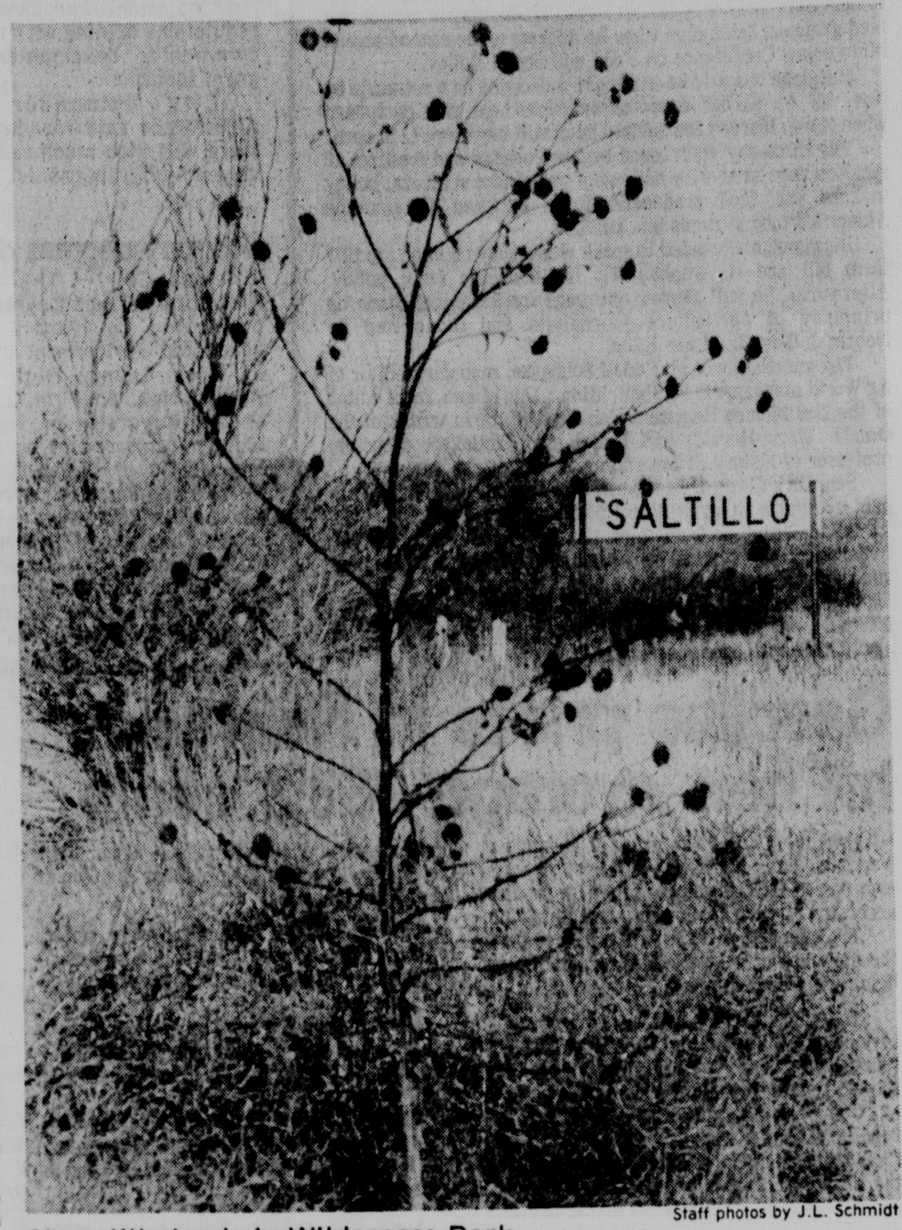

In 1871 Morton penned in his diary: "The steam wagon belonging to the late J.R. Brown still stands here, upon my farm where he left it in 1861 or 2. Never have been offered more than two hundred dollars for it and therefore never sold it. It is badly eaten by rust and is worth nothing except for old iron."

Steam wagon or not, Saltillo survived until the early 1900s. The "Nebraska Gazetteer and Business Directory" for 1886 listed 35 farmers, a post office and a station, telegraph and express agent in Saltillo.

By 1879, Postmaster J.K. Baker was also listed as having "tobacco, cigars and etc." and Henry Simmons was listed as justice of the peace. In 1890, the T.W. Lowry grain company and J. Reed stone quarry had joined the list. Simmons Bros. grain was added to the list in 1902, but by 1907 Saltillo was credited as having only a "discontinued post office with mail delivered from Roca."

A 1953 newspaper article quoted some of the last residents of Saltillo as remembering the town's heyday. Dora Hoy, then 84, reminisced that "it used to be quite an active town, but the floods drove some of the people away."

No matter what the reason, Saltillo is gone. But the memories linger on in Wilderness Park.

Help is on the way for isolated inhabitants of tiny St. Helena

London (AP) — When the ship Good Hope Castle pulls away from St. Helena Thursday for Southampton, England the Union Castle Mail Steamship Co. will end 120 years of regular passenger calls at the lonely island in the South Atlantic Ocean where Napoleon died in exile in 1821.

The ocean passenger trade is dead, except for a few cruise liners. Cargo vessels nowadays are built to carry containers and few companies bother to fit in cabins for passengers.

This is bad news for the 5,000 inhabitants of St. Helena, marooned without an airfield on their speck of remnant British empire 1,150 miles from the Angolan coast of East Africa, 1,694 miles from Cape Town and 4,606 miles from England.

But help is on the way. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has bought a ship to keep the lifeline open.

"The island can never be independent because it cannot support itself. We have just got to accept that and do what we can for the people there," an official said.

The ship for St. Helena is the 3,150-ton Northland Prince, bought from a Canadian company and now under conversion by managers in Cornwall, who will operate it for the British government between England and Cape Town.

Its first trip will be in December, taking home for Christmas some of the St. Helenians who work 700 miles away on Ascension Island, where there is a U.S. satellite tracking station and a British wireless relay station.

The ship is a come-down from Union Castle's stately 10,000-tonners, but the Foreign Office says it will have about 100 berths for passengers and is large enough to give them a comfortable ride and carry all the supplies the islanders need.

St. Helena looks like a parade in color photographs. It is the top of an enormous mountain rising from the ocean bed, the surviving half of a volcano that blew up millions of years ago. Surrounded by calm seas, the island, just 10 miles wide and six miles long, lies in the track of southeast trade winds that give it a perpetual English summer climate.

As the site of Napoleon's six-year exile after the battle of Waterloo, St. Helena became the most famous and discussed spot in the world. The British put in 3,000 soldiers and sailors to make sure Napoleon did not repeat his escape from the Mediterranean island of Elba.

For two centuries the island flourished by supplying fresh food and water to ships sailing from Britain to the east around Africa's Cape of Good Hope. It was populated by British expatriates, slaves imported by the British from West Africa and Madagascar, descendants of the Portuguese who discovered the island, the Dutch who first annexed it, Malays, Chinese, and travelers from other nations.

The Suez Canal's opening in 1869 doomed the island's prosperity and it has been running down ever since. British taxpayers pay the equivalent of $2.9 million a year to sustain it and even tomatoes, eggs, potatoes and canned milk are imported.

"The trouble is, there is nothing to pull up to," said the Foreign Office man when asked why the islanders apparently are so helpless. "There is no industry and two-thirds of the island is barren."

Anthony Thornton has a different explanation. The British-born architect, who lives in Cape Town, South Africa, was excluded from St. Helena in 1975 after he formed a political party which issued a manifesto calling for economic reforms to lessen dependence on Britain.

Thornton, who spent eight years on St. Helena, said the basic problem is that Britain has made the islanders totally dependent on British aid.

"Ninety-five percent of them are government-employed — 30 percent directly and the others through the government-controlled trading company," Thornton said in a recent interview when he visited London on business. "No money is invested to create production. I wanted every family at least to have a small plot to grow their own vegetables."

Thornton said he upset the St. Helena establishment — "the governor, two dozen settlers, expatriate colonial officials and some senior islanders" by going too far, too fast. He said he introduced new farming methods, livestock, fruit trees, irrigation, the first supermarket, renovated the principal hotel in the capital, Jamestown, and bought the trading company.

"I was accused by some of being a communist and by others of trying to introduce apartheid from South Africa. All rubbish," he said.

Expect the best and you'll likely get it

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a very attractive middle-aged man who has never fooled around as far as I know.

The company he works for sends him and a professional female co-worker out of town together (just the two of them) on business trips for several days' duration.

It seems to me that since it wouldn't be proper for just the two of them to have dinner together here in our home city, it's hardly fair for the company to send them out of town together.

My husband says it's strictly a business relationship, and I believe him. But she's pretty, young and single, and being only human, all that togetherness away from home could hatch a problem that's bigger than both of them.

How should I handle this?

JUST PLAIN JEALOUS

DEAR JEALOUS: What's to handle? Say nothing. Continue to trust him; expect the best and you'll probably get it. Any other action on your part would be unwise.

DEAR ABBY: Our son and his fiancee are being married soon. Our names were not included on the wedding invitations. When we asked our son about this, he said it was strictly up to the bride, and she selected the form that omitted the names of the bridegroom's parents.

Our friends and relatives disagree. They say that it is a slap in the face and a snub to us, and if we had an ounce of pride, we would not attend our son's wedding. After all, he wasn't laid on a log and hatched by the sun!

Who is right, Abby? What would you do?

HURT IN PENNA.

DEAR HURT: The standard American wedding invitation does not include the name of the groom's parents, so the bride should not be faulted for having selected that style. I would go to the wedding and bear no grudge.

DEAR ABBY; This is in response to the article about the girl who wore braces on her teeth. She said her boyfriend also wore braces, and when they kissed it was like running into a barbed wire fence, and it hurt.

Well, I'm a 22-year-old guy who's been wearing braces for three years, and I know exactly how she felt. When I used to kiss a girl with braces, it was like two freight trains colliding head on!

Braces have improved my kissing. I know kiss very slowly, gently and tenderly. I get compliments on my kisses all the time. I'm sure if it weren't for my braces I never would have learned how to be such a neat kisser.

Callers getting wrong number

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Crank calls for Playboy magazines's October "Playmate of the Month" have irritated at least 17 families here, but it's a case of mistaken identity.

Playboy identified the woman in captions as Kristine Winder of Vancouver. But she said in an interview earlier this week that Winder is not her real surname. She refused to say what it is.

A check of Winders in the Vancouver telephone book showed that some 17 families have been receiving calls. Some of the callers say nothing, just breathe into their receivers.

"I've had more than a dozen calls for this girl," said one Canadian woman. "It's very upsetting."

The centerfold model said she asked Playboy to use a name other than her own so her father wouldn't be upset. And she said she was sorry others were being bothered.

"I could take the crank calls," she said. "They don't really bother me so much."

Things weren't at all the same 'in the olden days'

Postcard

By Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "What was it like in the olden days, Dad?" (Miss Smock, the ferocious school teacher of "Changing Roles," has turned my golden child loose on me again.)

In a way she's an optimist, Miss Smock is. My daughter interviews me on the "olden days" — which were horrible. She takes it in to Miss Smock's class which will make them beautiful.

I said: "Well, in the olden days we were very honest."

True. We were raised on the books of Horatio Alger Jr.

"Sir," said the honest young newsboy, "you have given me a dime by mistake. The newspaper costs only a penny."

Horatio made it sound practical. I said: "In these days, the kid would have pocketed the dime. Maybe even mugged an old gaffer that careless.

"But Julius, the poor but honest newsboy, returned the dime to a banker. He was grateful to Julius and immediately gave him a job in the bank."

I said: "Probably at a modest salary. Bankers don't spoil the help, no matter how grateful they are."

I took a pull at the cooking sherry. I thought: "Let Miss Smock stop that one."

☆ ☆ ☆

There were no changing roles when I was studying equal angles and slingshoting the neighborhood cats.

The thing to do was go to school. Learn the roles they gave you. Never mind making changes. Changes came by persevering.

Wonderful changes happened to Horatio Alger's boys. (So why not to us?)

Here was Harry Walton, the young hero of "Bound to Rise."

"Dear Father," he wrote in a letter, "I must tell you to begin with that I have been compelled to stop work in the shoe shop. The market is overstocked and so trade has become very dull."

Trade is dull. But not the lively life of Harry Walton.

☆ ☆ ☆

"However, I have found another job," he penned. "I have engaged as assistant to Professor Henderson, the famous magician and ventriloquist, and am to start tomorrow morning on a traveling tour with him."

"Assistant to a magician!" exlaimed Mrs. Walton. "What does the boy know about magic?"

That was the magic of it. I said: "That was what we did in the olden days. We went off on tours with magicians. And people who could throw their voices."

☆ ☆ ☆

Of course, that's not what they're after in the modern class of "Changing Roles." What they are after is how women are "Bound to Rise." Make way for Superchick!

I said: "Look, I'm all for equal rights for women. Even better rights than I have. Like you have thr gith to do the dishes. At least half the time. And not sneak off to school before I get up and find the sink full."

☆ ☆ ☆

Harry Walton soon learned to throw his voice as if it came out of a trunk. "Oh, I shall die! Let me out!" The audience shouted: "Let him out! Let him out!"

Harry then opened the trunk. It was empty!

Immediately I sent off to a mail order house whch sold a gadget you could put in your mouth and throw your voice. It cost only a dime, surely a bargain.

I stuck it under my tongue and threw my voice in the closet. "Help! Let me out!"

But my grandmother only said: "Let you out of what? Heaven's sake, stop mumbling." She had my number.

Opening lead — six of clubs.

Assume you're in six spades and West leads a club. Prospects look good, but when you win the club lead and play the A-K of spades, East shows out and you now have a sure trump loser.

This is an unfortunate development, but you're not licked yet. To begin with, there is a possibility of getting rid of your club loser on dummy's fourth heart. If West ruffs the fourth heart, you can later try the diamond finesse. But if it turns out that West follows to four rounds of hearts, you can avoid the inherent danger of a diamond finesse by endplaying him.

In order to take advantage of all these possibilities, you stop drawing trumps and play four rounds of hearts, discarding your club loser on the fourth heart. At this point you must be careful to ruff dummy's remaining club in preparation for the endplay you have in mind. After doing this, you play a trump to the queen and lead dummy's last heart, discarding a diamond from your hand.

If West ruffs, he'll have to return a diamond; it's the only suit he'll have left. So let's assume West discards a diamond instead. This merely postpones his agony, because you now put him on lead with a trump and force the diamond return into your A-Q. The only trick you lose is a trump.

If you neglect to ruff dummy's club loser after playing four rounds of hearts, you allow West to get off the hook. Suppose you played the fifth round of hearts instead. West would ruff and return either a club or a trump, and you'd end up going down one.

The goal you set during the play is to avoid the diamond finesse, and to do so you must arrange your plans carefully — so that West is forced to make a friendly return at the finish.

Now. Improved taste and less tar in Salem King.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

Now Salem King has more smoking enjoyment and satisfaction than ever before.

As the leader in modern cigarette technology, the makers of Salem have succeeded in developing a breakaway from other full flavor menthol cigarettes. A more flavorful Salem King, at a lower tar level than ever before.
Salem has actually improved its cool, fresh taste to give you more satisfaction with every puff.
It all adds up to today's kind of smoking enjoyment.
And it's all in Salem King.

Improved taste and less tar in Salem King.

Lanik capitalizes on rare chance

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

He knew he heard the play correctly in the huddle, but Mitch Lanik could hardly believe it. A 25 belly pass meant he was the intended receiver.

Wahoo Neumann's 5-10, 155-pound junior was as prepared for that as much as he was prepared for a tornado to swoop down on the field.

Lanik is a tight end, but head coach Bob Brandt told him last August to consider himself another offensive lineman in Neumann's wishbone attack.

Sure enough, Lanik was a blocker, not a receiver, in the Cavaliers' first 10 games. The only pass thrown his way had been a two-point conversion attempt, and he caught it.

So here it was in the first quarter of the state Class C-1 semifinals against unbeaten Centennial and Lanik heard quarterback Pat Martin call a play he hadn't called all season. The result was a 72-yard touchdown bomb. Martin and Lanik also hooked up on a 32-yard scoring strike on the same play in the same quarter to start Neumann on its way to an 18-6 win over Centennial.

Even though Lanik produced in his rare opportunities, he acknowledged that he was scared.

"Coach, how come you didn't tell me we were going to try that pass?" he asked Brandt after the game.

"I told him I didn't tell him because I had no idea myself," Brandt said. "It wasn't by design. I expected another grind-it-out type of night. We rarely think about passing."

That's reflected in the statistics. Entering the game, Neumann had passed only 34 times, completing 15 for a meager 167 yards and one touchdown.

"Centennial dared us to pass," Brandt said. "They took a defensive back out to use another lineman. We thought we'd better try to pass once. When they didn't make the adjustment, we tried it again and it worked again."

It all made an unlikely hero out of Lanik, whose cousin, Doug, quarterbacked Neumann to a state Class C-1 runnerup finish behind Plainview two years ago.

"I don't know how we keep winning," Mitch confided. "Realistically, I didn't know if we had the material to win half our games this year. I don't know what it is, but we just keep going. I think it's because we have the best coaches in the state."

It's definitely not because Neumann is physically gifted. The Cavaliers, who saw graduation wipe out all seven starters from end to end in 1976, average less than 160 pounds a man on offense.

Their offensive guards are Tim Maly (5-7, 140) and Dave Tvrdy (5-6, 140).

"We are small, but our kids are strong," Brandt said. "They pump a lot of weight and feel like they're quicker than the opponent."

Neumann will have to be quicker than unbeaten Gibbon, its challenger for the championship Friday night at Boys Town.

"Our center (165 pounds) will be going against a noseguard who weighs 202, and our guards will be giving 60 pounds a man to their linebackers," Brandt pointed out.

For Neumann to win, it may take some special plays in the huddle. No one, though, will question them if they're called.

Baltimore holds on to top Washington

Baltimore (UPI) — Freddie Scott's leaping catch of a 12-yard touchdown pass from Bert Jones early in the fourth quarter gave the Baltimore Colts a 10-3 rain-soaked victory over the Washington Redskins' Monday night in the nationally televised NFL game.

Scott's catch, made in front of Redskins' cornerback Gerard Williams with 12:47 left, kept the Colts, 7-1, atop the AFC East, one game in front of Miami. Soccer-style kicker Toni Linhart, who had a 26-yard field goal early in the first quarter, booted the conversion for Baltimore's 10th point.

Washington, 4-4, got its only points on Mark Moseley's 40-yard field goal shortly before halftime.

Baltimore's defense kept scrambling Washington quarterback Joe Theismann largely under control, sacking him five times. Theismann, starting his second game since replacing Billy Kilmer, completed just 11of-27-passes for 168 yards. He was also intercepted twice — both times by Baltimore linebacker Stan White.

The last interception halted a desperation Redskins' drive with 1:38 to go in the game. Theismann again drove the Redskins from their 26 to the Baltimore 16, but time ran out.

Jones, who suffered through a 3-for-14 passing performance in the rainy first half, rebounded to finish 13-for-27 for 180 yards.

Osborne credits depth, kicking game

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne has maintained from the beginning of the season that while his Cornhusker club may lack the "star," he is pleased to have a squad of fine football players who are nearly equal in ability.

"That depth — and our kicking game — is what won the Missouri game for us Saturday," Osborne told the Extra Point Club at its Monday luncheon.

"We don't have four or five players who may go in the first round of the pro draft, like we've had in past years," Osborne admits, "but we have a lot of good players of nearly equal ability."

Osborne ticked off the names of four starters who didn't see any action — defensive tackle Rod Horn, linebacker James Wightman, middle guard Jeff Pullen and fullback Monte Anthony — two more who were lost for the afternoon before the first half was over — quarterback Tom Sorley and I-back Isaiah Hipp — plus a second middle guard — Kerry Weinmaster — who was out for the day on the first play of the second half.

In addition, Osborne reminded, a second I-back (Richard Berns) and starting center Tom Davis were injured and removed before the game was over.

"That's a total of nine players who have been starters," Osborne emphasized. "Seven of them were lost for the second half, if not the whole game. That can make a lot of difference."

Backup personnel came on to do a fine job, Osborne said, particularly pointing to the play of quarterback Randy Garcia, middle guard Oudious Lee and the running of Berns.

"The real margin was in the kicking game," Osborne added. "We enjoyed excellent field position because of the difference in the punting averages (NU's Tim Smith averaged nearly 40 yards a punt to just 27 yards for Missouri). Missouri had one 6-yard punt, another we partially blocked and Ted Harvey had a 42-yard punt return.

"As a result," Osborne said, "we started out in their territory all but four or five of the 15 times we got the ball. Usually it's the other way around. You're usually lucky to get the ball in their end of the field more than four or five times."

Osborne said his only real disappointment with the game "was the fact we didn't score more points with that kind of field position."

In reviewing the game with the Tigers, Osborne referred to "the great many decisions by the officials which entered into the outcome."

Osborne discussed several of the more crucial, particularly the controversial touchdown by Nebraska's Rick Berns (allowed) and the end zone pass to Missouri's Kellen Winslow, which was disallowed as a score.

"I'll say this," Osborne observed, "the officiating was better after watching the films of the game than I thought it was at the time."

Discussing Saturday's final home game of the season against Kansas, Osborne said he suspected most people would look past the struggling Jayhawks to the Oklahoma game.

"I know the tendency of the fans and the press will be to speculate on the Oklahoma game," Osborne said. "But we can't afford to do that, Kansas (2-6-1 overall) has played a tough schedule and they haven't been blown out by anyone."

Osborne noted that no matter who Nebraska is playing, the foe is always up for a top effort against the Cornhuskers. "Kansas is capable of playing good football," he said. "We just assume whoever we play, will play us tough."

The Husker coach said Kansas will alternate between the Wishbone and I-formations offensively and will run a "Tennessee defense. That defense is a 5-2 front, but the nose guard will stand up instead of getting down in a stance.

"Their defensive linemen will also play on the inside shoulder instead of the outside," Osborne continued. "So that will be a new look for us and could cause some problems. We are expecting a tough football game."

Win over St. Cecilia key for Sandy Creek

By Chuck Sinclair
Prep Sports Writer

Kearney — To illustrate the importance of Sandy Creek's upset over Hastings St. Cecilia in Class C district volleyball last week, Coach Diane Mahoney termed it more exciting to the team than the eventual regional win over Kearney Catholic that moved the Fairfield-based school into the state tournament Friday and Saturday at Kearney.

In fact, Mahoney was so excited when she phoned her results into the Nebraska Schools Activities Assn., she couldn't remember her team had compiled a 17-2 record up to that point.

To look at St. Cecilia's school history, it's not hard to figure why the triumph meant so much to rival Sandy Creek backers.

The only champion Class C girls track has ever had, St. Cecilia also captured the first Class C girls state basketball tournament last winter.

To top it all off, the Blue Hawks were an overwhelming favorite to win not only the districts and regional, but also the state volleyball tournament by virtue of two major team championships this season, the Hastings Chamber of Commerce meet and the Cornhusker Classic with top teams in all classes entered.

St. Cecilia beat Class A state tournament entry Lincoln East in the finals of the Cornhusker meet and Class B entry Lincoln Pius X in the finals of the Hastings tournament.

Sandy Creek, ironically, had lost only to St. Cecilia and Lincoln Pius X during the season.

Despite the 16-14, 15-5 loss to St. Cecilia, Mahoney was quietly confident of the district match with the Blue Hawks.

"I thought we had it won when we walked onto the court," Mahoney said. "I could just feel it in the atmosphere. Our girls wanted it that bad. But it was still a stunning upset.

"Confidence was the major factor," she added. "The week before we worked on that mental block St. Cecilia seems to have on everybody. We just told them we knew we could do it over and over."

Sandy Creek led the entire first game until St. Cecilia tied it at 11-all.

"They had two chances to go ahead and we stopped them both times," Mahoney said. "That was the key to the whole match."

Sandy Creek went on to win 15-13, 15-7.

Sandy Creek is now entering Friday's 2:15 p.m. first round match against Ewing at Cushing Coliseum with that same kind of confidence.

"We feel we beat one of the best getting here," Mahoney said. "We'd like to keep it going."

The state meet appearance is the third for Sandy Creek, but the first for Mahoney in her second year of coaching at the school.

"We've had great teamwork all year," Mahoney said. "And we had four starters return from last year. Besides, all six of our starters are seniors. So if we're going to do it, now is the time."

Simpson may return to play for Buffalo Bills

Buffalo (AP) — Pride and a desire to "end my career on a positive note" may cause star running back O. J. Simpson to return to the Buffalo Bills next season, but he said Monday he would like to come back from his knee injury playing for a championship contender.

Simpson will undergo surgery Tuesday or Wednesday for cartilage damage to his left knee and will miss the rest of the National Football League season. However, he said the surgery isn't expected to be serious.

"I'm glad it's a cartilage and not a ligament. If you have to have a knee injury, mine is the kind to have. You often don't need a cast and are off crutches after three to four weeks," Simpson said.

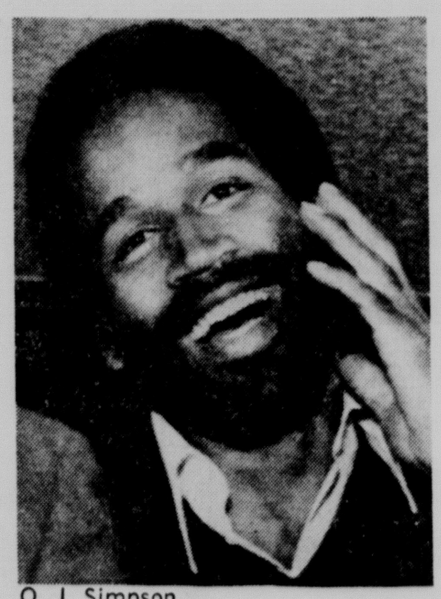

He said his chances of returning to the Bills are "as good as any," but said he would wait until after his rehabilitation to make a decision.

Among the factors that will shape the decision:

—"I'd like to end my career on a positive note," he said.

—"I don't want to end my career sitting on the bench," he said, explaining he would not return if he doesn't feel in peak form.

—"I've been meeting directors and getting tons of scripts," he said, explaining that he might decide it is time to devote full-time to his acting career.

O. J. Simpson

. . . 'positive note'

—"If I were traded to a championship team, I wouldn't be unhappy. I would play for a championship team anywhere and I would play for a lot less money," Simpson said.

Simpson, however, said a trade was up to Bills' owner Ralph Wilson.

"I'm not looking to be traded. I definitely won't ask for one," he said.

Surgery was recommended by specialists who examined the knee because it was beginning to atrophy, Simpson said. He admitted that if the Bills were contending for a playoff spot, he might have postponed the operation.

NCAA lifts most of probation for Minnesota teams

Minneapolis (AP) — An indefinite probation against all men's sports at the University of Minnesota — except basketball — has been lifted by the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the school announced Monday.

The university basketball program remains on probation until Oct. 28, 1978, the announcement said.

The lifting of the probation was expected since the university ended an impasse with the NCAA by declaring basketball players Michael Thompson and Dave Winey ineligible.

The NCAA had contended that Thompson, the Big Ten Conference scoring champion last season, had sold season tickets for more than their face value and that Winey had accepted free lodging at a lake home from a university booster.

The basketball probation dates from the day University President C. Peter Magrath informed the NCAA of the ineligibility action taken against the two 6-foot-10 basketball players.

The basketball probation actually amounts to an increased penalty and means the team will not be able to appear in post-season tournaments next spring or on NCAA-sponsored television games this season.

The basketball program had been placed on a three-year probation, which was due to expire in early March, 1978, for dozens of recruiting violations which occurred under former Coach Bill Musselman.

The announcement said the NCAA Committee on Infractions discussed by telephone hookup Monday the university's petition for removal of the probation against all men's sports.

Garcia replaces Sorley

There was one change in the latest Nebraska depth chart which was released Monday afternoon as the Cornhuskers whipped through a two-hour practice.

Quarterback Randy Garcia, who replaced the injured Tom Sorley last Saturday at Missouri, has regained the top signal-calling spot.

Sorley, who suffered bruised ribs in the win over the Tigers, is not expected to be ready for this week's home finale against the Jayhawks. Senior Ed Burns moved up to the No. 2 quarterback job behind Garcia.

Tom Davis and I.M. Hipp were listed with the top units, but their names had an asterisk in front of them. The asterisk noted Davis and Hipp may not be ready this week because of leg injuries.

The top spots on the depth chart included:

Offense

Defense

Healthy players rare at Kansas

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — Kansas was so low on players at its Monday football practice that the Jayhawks were forced to use "managers, trainers, and the walking wounded," to get through the workout, Coach Bud Moore said.

The shortage of players was caused by a junior varsity game plus seven players who were absent because of injuries.

The sidelined players were: Franklin King, James Jackson, John Calovich, Jim Emerson, Wardell Johnson and starters Max Ediger and Mike Gay. Ediger, who has a bruised elbow and knee, and Gay, who also has a bruised knee, are both expected to be back for KU's game Saturday with Nebraska.

The only bright spot in the Jayhawks injury picture was the return of Jimmy Little. Little, starting cornerback, missed last Saturday's Kansas State game with a bruised thigh.

Pressure's not off for CSIC champions Kearney State, Boroff

By Ken Hambleton
State College Writer

Kearney State clinched its second straight Central States Conference football title Saturday by topping arch-rival Fort Hays, but Antelope coach Claire Boroff says the pressure isn't off yet.

Kearney, which stumbled through a 0-1-1 start, notched its seventh consecutive win to boost its record to 7-1-1 overall and 6-0 in the two-year-old CSIC.

"We still have the pressure of gaining a higher national ranking and the possibility of gaining a post-season playoff bid," said Boroff. "And any time we have a game, we want to win, so the pressure's on even if we hadn't won a game all season."

The Antelopes were rated eighth in the NAIA's Division I last week and stand a good chance of moving up in this week's poll, released on Wednesday.

Top-rated Texas A&I, which held the nation's longest winning streak of 46 victories, fell to East Texas State 7-6, while fourth ranked Henderson State, Ark., and sixth ranked Angelo State, Tex., also lost over the weekend.

Kearney leads its area (Northwest), filling one requirement for earning a bid to the NAIA playoffs, and has a good chance of being ranked in the top six, the other requirement for the playoff schools.

Kearney hosts 14th ranked Missouri Western Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in the regular season finale for both teams.

"We played the best defensive game we have all season against Fort Hays," said Boroff. "And we'll need another sterling defensive game against Missouri Western."

"They're enjoying their best season ever and have the same record (7-1-1) as we do," said Boroff, referring to Mo. Western, which is 4-1-1 in the CSIC.

The Antelopes, who have no "big name" players on this year's squad, are "the closest to being a complete team we've ever had," according to Boroff, now in his sixth year, as head coach of the Antelopes.

"We average playing 55 people a game and I'm sure that in every game we've had 22 defensive people and at least 20 offensive players," said Boroff.

"We have some great individuals like Doug Peterson, Roger Wacholtz, Steve Bates, Loren Wiederspahn and Bill Windhorst, and some standout offensive backs like Gregg Baker and Kevin Roach," said Boroff. "Jeff Bolin, has averaged 7.5 yards per carry over the last three years, but you'll probably never see him on an all-conference team because we play so many people.

"It hurts the kids' chances of big glory but it certainly boosts team morale when you play so many people," said Boroff. "And if it helps win ball games we continue doing it."

Chadron, which finished 8-2, has an outside chance for a berth in the Boot Hill Bowl at Dodge City, Kansas. The Eagles, ranked 15th in the NAIA Div. II will receive word on the bowl bid early this week.

Steelers slated for double duty

Pittsburgh (UPI) — Look for some starting members of the Pittsburgh Steelers to do unusual double duty on the specialty teams in the crucial AFC Central Division game with the division-leading Cleveland Browns next Sunday.

Coach Chuck Noll said Monday he has no choice but to make some wholesale changes on the makeup of the kicking teams following Sunday's 21-7 loss to the Denver Broncos. What cost the Steelers' most was their punt coverage — Bronco Rick Upchurch returned five punts for 167 yards, returning one 87 yards for a touchdown and giving his team great field position with the others.

"Looking at the films doesn't illuminate anything new," Noll said of the loss, which dropped the Steelers to 4-4 and put them in a threeway tie for second place in the four-team central division. "It still comes back to the punt coverage: when they (the Broncos) have almost as much yardage in punt returns as they do in total offense, that tells you the story of the ball game."

The irony of the punting team's performance, Noll said, was that aging punter Bobby Walden, who has been inconsistent this season, "probably kicked better than he has in most of the games this year."

After the Broncos took a 21-0 halftime lead, Noll began revamping the kicking teams, sending in safety Donnie Shell, a standout member of the kicking teams last year who has been playing safety exclusively this year in place of injured Mike Wagner.

Shell is apparently just one of many veterans who are going to be returning to action on the speciality teams, despite Noll's preference to use inexperienced players on them.

"Usually, what we try to do is bring some people along who have some capabilities by putting them on the specialty teams," Noll said. "It's an opportunity for them to play."

Adding to Noll's problem in finding the proper people for the kicking teams was the indefinite loss of two more defensemen Sunday: defensive ends L.C. Greenwood and John Banaszak, who both injured knees.

For sure, Noll said, both will miss the Cleveland game and could be out even longer. On top of that Noll seemed doubtful that injured linebacker Jack Lambert would be able to play either. Those absences coupled with the placement of Wagner of the injured reserve list could mean real problems for the defense, which has been carrying the team all season.

Greenwood, Banaszak and rookie linebacker Dennis "Dirt" Winston, who injured a hand Sunday, had x-rays Monday but all were negative.

A team spokesman said Winston should be ready for the Cleveland game.

Starr: I'm not quitter

Green Bay, Wis. (AP) — Bart Starr insisted Monday he has no intention of quitting as head coach of the Green Bay Packers, regardless of what noted oddsmaker Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder says.

Snyder said on a nationally televised show Sunday that he expected Starr to resign as coach and remain as general manager after the current National Football League season. He made his comment prior to the Packers' 20-10 defeat by the Kansas City Chiefs Sunday.

Kevin Porter goes to Nets

Detroit (UPI) — Talented-but-troubled guard Kevin Porter plus forward Howard Porter were traded by the Detroit Pistons to the New Jersey Nets along with an undisclosed amount of money Monday in exchange for guard-forward Al Skinner and two second round draft choices.

The swap terminates a long-standing fued between Kevin Porter, one-time National Basketball Association assists leader, and Coach Herb Brown of the Pistons. Brown denied their differences lead to the trade.

"Kevin's attitude has been tremendous this season and I wish both players the best," Brown said. "Al Skinner is a big guard who is also capable of playing a swing position. He is young and hard working, a defensive player and an excellent foul shooter."

Detroit will also get a secondround choice in each of the 1978 and 1979 drafts.

Kevin Porter led the NBA in assists in 1974-75 while playing for the Washington Bullets.

Last season the diminutive and flashy playmaker, irked at not starting and having to share playing time with Chris Ford, Eric Money and Ralph Simpson, was fourth in assists with a 7.3 average.

Razorbacks, Tech on TV

New York (AP) — The Arkansas-Texas Tech college football game will be televised nationally on Thanksgiving Day at 2:30 p.m. EST, ABC-TV announced Monday.

In addition, the network also said the Baylor-Texas game Nov. 19 would be shown from 4-7 P.M. EST, as the primary regional contest following the national telecast of Ohio State Michigan from 12:30-4 p.m. Three other regionals will be announced later.

S.D. adopts Nebraska pact

Pierre, S.D. (AP) — A boundary waters agreement with Nebraska is among new fishing regulations adopted by South Dakota's Game, Fish and Parks Commission.

The boundry agreement will allow reciprocal fishing on all Missouri River waters lying between Nebraska and South Dakota.

It allows fishermen from either state to fish in the boundary waters on a resident fishing license of his home state.

The agreement includes Lake Yankton and the Gavins Point tailwaters as well as oxbows, sloughs, backwaters and chutes drawing water from the river itself.

Corbett offers Hisle $3 million

Arlington, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers owner Brad Corbett said Monday he has offered free agent outfielder Larry Hisle a 10-year contract for about $3 million to lure the American League runs batted in champion to Texas.

But Corbett added he would not offer Hisle a bonus in addition to the contract cash.

"No," Corbett answered when asked about a possible bonus. "If he doesn't want a contract, to hell with it."

Hisle's agent, Dick Moss, said the Rangers' offer was strong enough to convince the former Minnesota player that the Rangers want him.

Jardine quits at Wisconsin

Madison, Wis. (AP) — John Jardine, whose teams have had just one winning season in his nearly eight seasons as University of Wisconsin football coach, resigned Monday under the pressure of a four-game losing streak.

Jardine, 41, told a news conference after practice that he will finish the season with the team. The Badgers play Iowa here Saturday and close their season at Minnesota Nov. 19.

"I have nothing but super memories," a red-eyed, tired-looking Jardine said."

Cage tourney seeks entries

Garland — Entries are now being accepted for the Garland Baseball Club's sixth annual basketball tournament Jan. 6-8, 14-15 and 21-22.

The deadline for entries is Dec. 15 and there will be a limit of 32 teams. The tournament is open to city league and town teams.

Further information may be obtained from Jerry Schaefer, Box 200, Garland, Neb., 68360.

Bowls possible for four Big 8 squads

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — Four Big Eight teams remain in contention for post-season bowl bids as the 1977 season heads into its 10th week.

Either Oklahoma or Nebraska will represent the conference in the Orange Bowl, depending on the outcome of their Nov. 25 game in Norman, with the loser expected to join Iowa State and possibly Colorado at a lesser post-season game.

Iowa State is 6-3 with its two remaining games against Kansas State and Oklahoma State. The Cyclones are likely to be favored in both contests but an 8-3 season would not necessarily mean a bowl bid. It didn't last year when Iowa State had the second most productive offense in the nation.

"We should have gone to a bowl game last year," said Iowa State coach Earle Bruce Monday by telephone at the weekly Big Eight media briefing. "We could have beaten half the teams that went to bowl games. Because you're invited to a bowl game doesn't mean you're a great team."

Colorado is 6-2-1 on the year, having beaten Iowa State 12-7 Saturday to snap a three-game winless streak. But the Buffaloes must travel to Norman this week to play Oklahoma before finishing out with a breather against Kansas State.

"A bowl bid is the farthest thing from my mind," said Colorado coach Bill Mallory. "We're just trying to get this team back together. But I have felt all along that at least four teams from this conference should go to a bowl each year.

Ancient Age gives you more*!

*More proof that is!
Since several leading bourbons recently reduced their proof from 86 proof to 80, you may end up paying the same money you did when they were 86 proof.
Ancient Age could have lowered its proof too, but we didn't. We're a great tasting whiskey and a great value.

We figure you've been buying 86 proof bourbon for a good reason—you like it. Besides if you're going to pay for 86 proof why not get it.
When you buy Ancient Age you get what you pay for. . .86 proof Kentucky Bourbon at its finest.

Football

Sophomore quarterback Marc Wilson, who passed for five touchdowns and an NCAA record 571 yards Saturday in leading Brigham Young University to a 38-8 victory over Utah, was named Monday to United Press International's Backfield of the Week.

Joining Wilson in the Backfield of the Week are Billy Taylor of Texas Tech, Charles White of Southern California and Wes Chandler of Florida.

Veteran safety Glen Edwards has ended a five-day walkout and will return to practice with the Pittsburgh Steelers Tuesday, Edwards' attorney and Steelers officials said Monday.

Green Bay Packers Coach Bart Starr said Monday he has no intention of resigning, but he admitted his staff feels it isn't doing the job it would like to do.

The New York Jets announced Monday that injured quarterback Richard Todd, the fourth-ranked passer in the American Football Conference, would not play in Sunday's game against the Seattle Seahawks.

Basketball

The Boston Celtics placed backup center Jim Ard on waivers Monday.

Madison Square Garden, owners of the New York Knicks, filed a $3.2 million lawsuit against the New Jersey Nets, in U.S. District Court Monday.

Baseball

The Baltimore Orioles will raise ticket prices for the 1978 baseball season despite turning a profit last season for the first time since 1974.

Cuba will not particpate in the International Amateur Baseball Supercup Tournament in Nicaragua Nov. 10-25, according to the official Cuban news agency.

Other sports

Bjorn Borg of the Cleveland Nets, who won the World Team Tennis singles title in 1977, was named Monday as the WTT's most valuable first-year male player.

Three senators Monday urged the NCAA to reverse its prohibition against Olympic gold medalist Brian Goodell and three teammates competing in a goodwill swim tour of the Soviet Union.

Cowboys ready for tough stretch

Dallas (UPI) — The Dallas Cowboys have now come to that part in their schedule that gives them a chance to prove they are as good as their 8-0 record.

Coach Tom Landry seems ready for it.

"This is going to be our toughest stretch of the season," Landry said following the Cowboys 24-10 win over the New York Giants on Sunday. "But I think it's what we need."

During the next three weeks Dallas faces St. Louis, Pittsburgh and Washington, who will perhaps give the Cowboys more inspiration than have their last three foes — Philadelphia, Detroit and the Giants.

"If we win two of those three games I'd say we'd have had an exceptional performance," the coach said.

For the past few weeks the Cowboys have been winning with a so-so performance from the offense and an increasingly stunning performance from the defense.

The Cowboys, easily leading the NFL in defense, sacked New York quarterback Joe Pisarcik eight times Sunday, bringing their season total to 39. That averages out to almost five traps per game and if the Cowboys keep that up they will crack their team record of 61.

San Francisco's defense led the league last year with 61 sacks.

Part of Dallas' offensive difficulties Sunday had to do with a first class defensive effort by the Giants and part of the trouble had to do with quarterback Roger Staubach's bruised and inflamed hip.

Staubach was a doubtful starter, but during warmups decided his hip felt better than it had in four days. So he played and wound up hitting 14 of 25 passes for 19 yards and a touchdown. He has thrown only one interception this year in 216 attempts.

"As long as a guy knows his injury is something that will not be worsened by playing he usually wants to play," said Staubach. "I fell hard on the hip once and got it hit once.

"It's going to be sore for a while."

"I think Roger's performance was remarkable," Landry said. "For a guy who had a leg as bad as he had and hurt as bad as he did this week, it was just really a credit to him that he played as well as he did.

"The doctors felt that the worse that could happen was that he would get hit and would have to go through another week of rehabilitation like he did last week. There was nothing serious that could happen, other than more soreness."

Buckeyes look toward Michigan

Columbus, Ohio (UPI) — Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes begins "battening down the hatches" this week for the annual Big Ten title game with Michigan.

Although the fourth-ranked Buckeyes still must get by a "good" Indiana team Saturday before the Nov. 19 clash with the Wolverines, Hayes obviously has started thinking maize and blue.

"For the rest of the season we're going to be a little more reticent about giving player Interviews," Hayes told his weekly press luncheon Monday, "and maybe the coaches too.

"We think it's to our advantage," Hayes added. "We're battening down the hatches. We don't do that for any personal reason. It's just that we want to win."

Hayes said the Buckeyes came through the 35-0 win over Illinois with no serious injuries, although starting tailback Ron Springs is likely to miss a couple days of practice with a shoulder bruise.

Hayes was asked whether he was concerned about the punting of Dave McKee, whose average in recent weeks has dwindled to just over 35 yards per game.

"Is that what you call it," snapped the veteran Buckeye Coach, who said freshman Tom Orosz, who has handled the kickoffs in superb fashion for the Buckeyes, also may get a shot at the punting.

Looking back at the Illinois win, Hayes said quarterback Rod Gerald played a "very efficient game. The interception he had wasn't his fault and he took a loss or two instead of making a bad pitchout. To me, that's the epitome of good football.

"Our defense was spotty when we started," Hayes said, "We were not controlling the line of scrimmage. But as the game went on, we did control the line of scrimmage and controlled them (Illinois)."

As for Indiana, Hayes called the Hoosiers "A good football team. I don't like to talk a team up. Let them talk themselves up. But I won't talk them down."

He did call Indiana "one of the four top teams in the league right now, adding, "they're improving, but so are we."

Springs, who gained 132 yards against Illinois and now needs only 69 to reach the 1,000 mark for the year, was named the offensive back of the week, while tackle Joe Robinson was offensive lineman of the week.

Defensively, top honors went to end Paul Ross.

Texas loses another QB?

Austin, Texas (AP) — Texas' depleted quarterbacks corps may have suffered another loss, Coach Fred Akers said Monday, as Randy McEachern was "extremely doubtful" for the Texas Christian game Saturday because of an injured knee.

If McEachern cannot play, the starter for the nation's No. 1 college football team would be Sam Ansley, a fourth-team freshman.

Ansley and junior Ted Constanzo, still slowed by a summer knee operation, apparently are the only Texas quarterbacks healthy enough to work out, as two other freshmen also are out with injuries.

Ansley has run four times for four yards and completed his only pass for 15 yards.

Pheasant bag picture varies across the state

Pheasant season opened in Nebraska on Saturday morning, with hunters in the Panhandle, southwest, and southcentral parts of the state outpacing their counterparts in the east.

Hunters homeward bound from the southwest and southcentral parts of the state stopped at Game and Parks Commission check stations with an average bag of around one bird per man.

Check station operators varied slightly in their assessment of the opener in those areas. George Schildman, the commission's upland game specialist, noted that hunter success seemed "considerably better than last year" at his Crete check station, which sampled traffic mainly from south and west of that point. Game biologist Jim Hurt, manning a check station south of Kearney, said that hunting was about the same or down slightly from 1976.

Conservation officers covering the area reported that hunters had poor visibility much of the morning because of fog, a handicap shared by hunters throughout most of the state. In some areas, however, the moisture brought by the fog improved hunting, holding scent for dogs. The officers said that the number of hunters was down slightly from last year, but that they were seeing plenty of birds.

Hunters in the Panhandle, who will have an abbreviated 16-day season this year, appeared determined to make the most of it. Check stations at Alliance, Hay Springs and Ogallala all showed hunters averaging better than a bird apiece halfway through opening day. Harvey Suetsugu, the Game and Parks Commission's chief wildlife biologist for the Panhandle, said that hunting appeared better than last year, and said hunters were seeing more birds.

Conservation officers in the Panhandle noted that hunting pressure was somewhat lighter than in previous years, particularly from nonresidents.

In northeast Nebraska, conservation officers were almost unanimous in saying that the number of hunters afield was down from previous years. A check station at Humphrey reported only a fraction of the normal number of hunters. Some officers said that bird numbers were also down, although others reported that populations in their localities were the same as last year or slightly higher.

Determining a pattern for the opener in the southeast was somewhat difficult. Some officers reported relatively low numbers of pheasants in the bag, even though hunters were seeing good numbers of birds. "Hunters blame spooky birds flushing out of range. But somehow, their marksmanship is never at fault," chuckled one check station operator.

In general, conservation officers noted no unusual problems on opening day.

The upland game hunting picture for Nebraska will be complete next Saturday, when the season on quail opens across the state. Nov. 12 also sees the opening of Nebraska's firearm deer season.

Professionalism marks Chiefs' win

Kansas City, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Chiefs achieved more than just a victory over the Green Bay Packers last weekend. They achieved a return to the world of professionalism.

The Chiefs, with Tom Bettis making his debut as head coach, overwhelmed Green Bay in all phases of Sunday's game to score a 20-10 victory. It came on the heels of a 44-7 thrashing in Cleveland the previous week — a performance that cost Paul Wiggin his job as head coach.

"Jack Rudnay (Chiefs' All-Pro center) talked to the team earlier in the week and what he said made a real impression on me," said running back Ed Podolak, who rushed for 98 yards and a touchdown against the Packers. "He said we've got a lot of players, but that anybody could be a player. What we needed were more professionals.

"A lot of people recommitted themselves to being professionals. Either you're going to be the best at what you do or you do something else."

Bettis' first move as head coach was to reinstall veterans Podolak, John Brockington and Mike Livingston into the starting backfield, and the three players were the major reason the Chiefs were able to play the entire game without a turnover.

Podolak responded to his first start of the season with his season high yardage figure, as well as catching four passes for 51 yards.

"We have a career to defend," Podolak said. "I play with a lot of pride and like to be known as a capable football player. I don't think the team transmitted that feeling (prior to the Green Bay game) and what made it worse personally was that I was on the bench.

"You have to be careful when you talk about rebuilding. It can become an excuse, and the young people start looking toward next year. The future is now. When we had the great teams in the early 1970's, and we would just miss a playoff spot, we said wait until next year. Next year never came."

The victory was just the second in eight games for Kansas City this season. The Chiefs play in Chicago against the Bears this week.

Keating hits Knolls ace

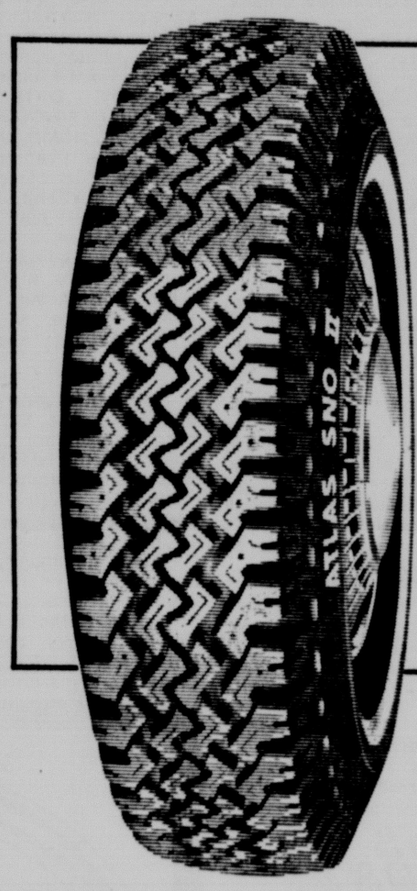

With the approach of winter, not all Lincoln golfers have hung up the stick for the season. That fact was demonstrated by Con Keating, who stroked a hole-in-one Saturday at the Knolls Country Club.

With playing partner Gerald Spethman watching the feat, Keating drilled his nine-iron shot smack in the middle of the cup on the 125-yard No. 9 hole.

Keating's ace enabled him to shoot a round of 30 for the day.

Norris petition seeks swim pool vote

Hickman — A swimming program for students in the Norris School District could become a reality as a result of a petition drive.

More than 250 registered voters in the district have signed a petition asking the board to call a special bond election for a pool "to serve the school curriculum and the recreational needs of the residents of the district."

The district comprises a large area of southeast Lancaster County. The signatures on the petition represent 10% of those who voted in the last general election — a sufficient number to mandate an election, by state law.

Donna Rudolph of Hickman, one of the leaders of the drive, said many parents want a pool at the school as an alternative to contact sports such as basketball and football.

The petition specifies that the election be held only if the school board is able to obtain a federal grant for the bulk of the cost.

No cost estimates are included in the petition.

It will be presented to the school board Thursday evening at its 7:30 p.m. meeting at the school.

Norris Superintendent Dennis Nosal said Monday that the board has never actually voted on the swimming pool issue.

Some board members suggested including a pool in a bond election last spring, but the board rejected the idea out of fear it would defeat the entire bond proposal, Nosal said.

The recent bonds — totalling $1.15 million — are for classrooms and gymnasium space.

The village board of Hickman has been considering building a city swimming pool, but has postponed any action on this until the school pool issue has been settled.

Malone Center banquet to feature Roger Sayers

Plans have been completed for the 46th Annual Malone Community Center banquet, to be held Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the Legionnaire Club in Lincoln.

Roger Sayers, manager of manpower planning and employment for Union Pacific in Omaha, will be the guest speaker at the 6:30 p.m. banquet. Sayers has been appointed to the National Association of Inter-Collegiate Athletics Hall of Fame for his track achievements at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, and is a brother of former Chicago Bear football star Gale Sayers.

Sayers has been active in community and professional activities in Omaha, according to Malone Center officials.

Saudi crude up

Nicosia, Cyprus (AP) — Saudi Arabia's daily production of crude oil averaged 9.35 million barrels during the first half of 1977, the Middle East Economic Survey has reported.

The total average production rate represents an increase of 14.5 percent over the first half of 1976.

Waverly business would soar with airport, council advised

Waverly — A small airport could give economic wings to this community of 1,800 people, the Waverly City Council was told Monday.

Jeff Gallup, president of Owl Aviation, which operates Arrow Airport in Lincoln, told the council members that a city-owned airport would bring a wealth of business and industry to the town, six miles east of Lincoln.

An initial investment of about $100,000 could provide an airfield that would handle "everything up through business jets," he said.

The ideal location for a new airport in Lancaster County would be just west of Waverly in the level flood plain north of Interstate-80, he said.

The city of Lincoln may close Arrow Airport within five years because it is in the proposed Lagoon Park being created by Lincoln's sanitary landfill.

But even if Arrow does not close, the added competition would be healthful, Gallup said. Other than Lincoln Municipal Airport — which some pilots say is already overcrowded — the closest airports are at Beatrice and Wahoo.

Lincoln is considering a site in southeast Lancaster County, near Hickman, for another airport airport, Gallup said. Waverly would have obvious advantages over Hickman because of better rail connections for industry and its proximity to Lincoln business cneters, he said.

The council appointed a committee to study the feasibility of the idea, comprising people both in and outside of Waverly.

Federal funds go to water systems

Omaha (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration has awarded several grants and loans to Nebraska communities for improvement of water systems.

Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., said Monday the funds are provided under the drought emergency program.

The recipients included:

— Primrose, $24,000 loan and $24,000 grant for a new water system well and pumping equipment.

— Culbertson, $236,000 loan and $55,900 grant for a new water storage tank, water mains and fire hydrants.

— Palmer, $33,000 loan and $8,100 grant for a new water system well and transmission lines.

— Minatare, $14,900 grant for a new water system well and pump.

— Gering, $91,200 grant for new water system well and storage tank.

— North Loup, $99,000 grant for rehabilitation of the community water system.

— Bartlett, $8,800 grant for an additional water system well.

— Platte Center, $10,700 grant for a new well and pipe to the existing main to serve 200 water users.

— Tilden, $18,000 grant coupled with sale of commercial bonds for a new well, well house and transmission line to tie into existing water delivery system.

Team to visit Southeast to evaluate its teaching

A team of Nebraska educators will visit Lincoln Southeast High School this week to evaluate the school's teaching program as a part of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools accreditation requirements.

Members of the team are Dr. Mary Ellen Goodenberger, assistant superintendent of McCook schools; Dr. Jack Hallstrom of Northwest High School, Omaha; Dr. Kenneth Hansen, assistant superintendent of Omaha Westside Community Schools; Dr. Gerald Jordan, Nebraska State Department of Education; Dr. Marie Kelley, of Lincoln Northeast High School; Dr. Max D. Larsen, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln; Dr. Edward J. Nemeth, UNL Teachers College; and Dr. Ward Sybouts, UNL department of secondary education.

Professor's painting in exhibit

University of Nebraska-Lincoln Associate Professor of Art Keith Jacobshagen will have one of his paintings shown in New York City at the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters annual Hassam and Speicher Purchase Fund Exhibition.

The oil painting, "West of Ashland," will be among those shown from Nov. 15 through Dec. 30.

From this exhibit, the Academy-Institute will purchase pictures in the amount of approximately $50,000 and give them to museums throughout the country.

Guards' show open to public

A Thursday performance at the Omaha Civic Auditorium of Her Majesty's Grenadier Guards and the Scots Guards will be open to the public.

A story carried in Sunday's FOCUS may have given readers the wrong impression that the Omaha performance was connected with the Community Concert Association, which is sponsoring a membership appearance of the same groups in Lincoln Wednesday. However, Community Concert memberships will not be valid for admission to the Omaha show.

Police continue investigation into theft of 50 beef quarters

Omaha (AP) — An investigation is continuing into the theft of about 50 quarters of beef from a truck, Omaha police said.

Three raids Sunday brought to 23 the number of beef quarters recovered, said Sgt. Bill Goodrich.

The meat was part of a load of 220 beef quarters valued at about $50,000 in a truck taken from the Red Feather Fast Freight lot in north Omaha. The truck was found at a truck stop, but the driver could not be located, Goodrich said.

On Saturday, 15 beef quarters were recovered and one man was arrested for suspicion of receiving stolen property, Goodrich said.

Police said the meat was owned by the Farmland Co. of Goodland, Kan. The truck was on its way to Chicago when the driver parked for the night at the Red Feather lot.

Natelson's signs Centrum lease

Natelson's Inc. signed a lease with Watson Centers Inc. of Minneapolis, which will own and operate the retail portion of the Centrum complex.

Louis Somberg, Omaha cofounder of the six-store Natelson group, said the centrum shop would be about half the size of the Gateway Natelson's store.

"Lincoln is one of the few cities where we'd consider opening a new outlet in the downtown area," he added.

Dan Bergeron, leasing manager, said six other retailers who have signed Centrum leases will be named about Dec. 1.

Real estate license is suspended

United Press International

The Nebraska Real Estate Commission Monday said it suspended for 10 days the real estate salesman's license of Donn Graham of Lincoln and censured Elmer A. Kath, a licensed real estate broker in Kimball.

The commission said Graham, a salesman for Clifford Bomberger of Century 21 Gold Key Realty of Lincoln, will have his license suspended for 10 days, beginning Nov. 14. A complaint filed against Bomberger was dismissed, the commission said.

Commission records show that Richard L. and Elaine R. Arndt of Lincoln bought a Lincoln home that was shown by Graham. The Arndts requested an inspection of the home's air conditioning system, but the inspection report was not received by the Arndts until two weeks after the transaction was closed, records show.

After moving into the home, the Arndts found the air conditioning system was defective and were forced to have the system repaired, records show.

The complaint against Kath was filed by the state and said Kath issued a check to the Kimball Livestock Auction Co. for $5,000, which resulted in a shortage in Kath's trust account of $326, the commission's records show.

The records show the shortage in the trust account continued until April 28, 1976, when Kath deposited additional funds. The commission said Kath's action was in violation of the Nebraska real estate license law.

The commission also said Kath's records failed to indicate whether any of the funds in his trust account represent broker's equity, thus indicating a commingling of funds in violation of the real estate license law.

Dodge County voters will decide on merger

Dodge County residents will decide at the election booth next year whether to merge seven school districts into one.

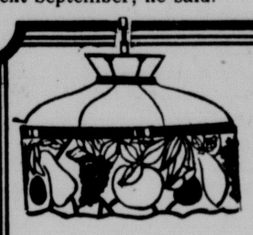

The Nebraska State Committee for the Reorganization of School Districts Monday put its stamp of approval on the election proposal.

The merger proposal would combine the Class III Scribner District with six smaller Class I districts and part of a seventh Class I District. Class I districts include kindergarten through eighth grades.

All the districts are within a five-mile radius of the Scribner District, according to Dr. Alan Warner, a State Department of Education staff member.

The districts involved are, 12, 24, 25, 29, 83, 90 and part of 18.

If the proposal is approved at the polls, the new district, with a new number and a new school board, will begin operation next September, he said.

Civic Center Supporters Answer Questions About The Project

Backers of Lincoln's Civic Center project (the proposed restoration of Old City Hall and the former Federal Building with a new linking structure) have recently answered these frequently asked questions:

Q: What will the Civic Center do for Lincoln?
A: It will create needed additional city offices at bargain prices. It will bring the city a new 2,700 seat entertainment center for popular and cultural attractions. The theatre will bring new performers to town . . . events that were impossible to stage before. The Civic Center will attract new convention and tourist interest. It will return to productive use two important historic landmarks that deserve preservation.

Q: With the other facilities available in Lincoln, why do we need the Civic Center Theatre?
A: The Civic Center Theatre is being designed specifically for performances on stage. This means that the acoustics, seating, sight lines, stage and equipment will be the best. Therefore, we will be able to bring the best performances to Lincoln and enjoy them in a specially designed setting with the optimum number of seats required to attract top quality performances.

Q: Will the Civic Center Theatre detract from other auditoriums in the city?
A: Very few events will be taken from those facilities. The Lincoln Symphony will make the Civic Center Theatre its new home and the Community Concert series may use it for appropriate events. In addition, some of the events presented at Kimball Hall will be moved here along with other productions by the University of Nebraska. O'Donnell Auditorium with 1,500 seats is used primarily for campus events at Nebraska Wesleyan and serves that purpose well. Kimball Recital Hall with 800 seats was designed primarily for faculty and student rehearsals and recitals.

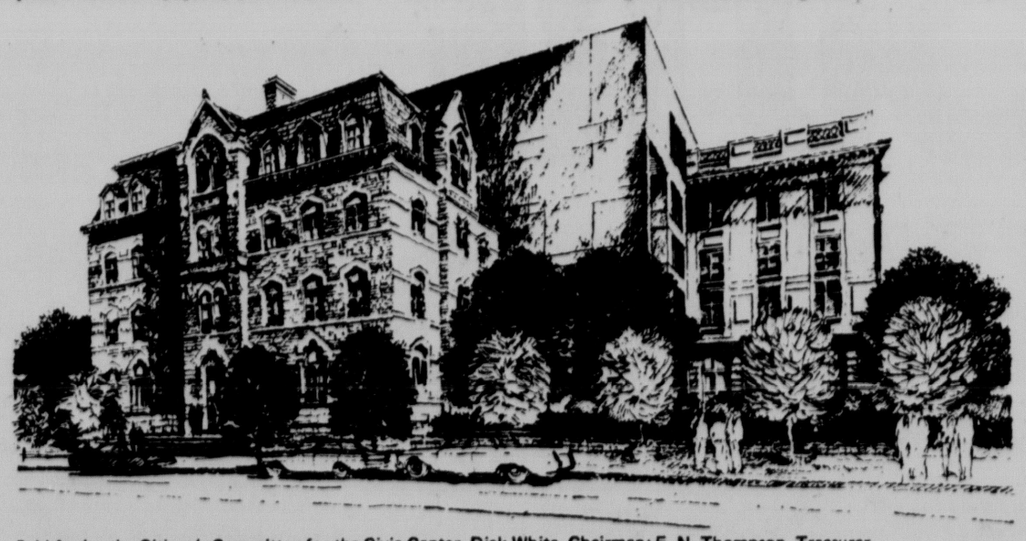

Q: Can the Stuart Theatre serve the same function as the Civic Center?
A: No. The University has determined it could not serve as a major performing arts hall because of the limited stage width, depth and seating capacity which would not be corrected even by costly renovation.

Q: What about parking?
A: Downtown Lincoln has over 3,000 evening parking spaces within a 2½ block radius of the proposed Civic Center. The new Centrum project will have hundreds of additional stalls.

Q: Do we need more City office space?
A: Yes! Since the County-City Building was constructed, the services required of City government have grown. The increase in personnel and services requires additional office space. The City is currently using as much of the Old Federal Building as fire codes will allow.

Q: How much will the Civic Center cost?
A: The cost of construction, renovation and preservation is estimated to be $6,371,715.00. The bond issue will be for $7,000,000.00 which provides for possible inflationary increases in costs. Only the amount of bonds actually necessary will be sold, however. The cost is considerably less than that of new construction. Federal funding in excess of $180,000.00 will be available to help renovate Old City Hall.

Vote for the Civic Center Bond Issue on Nov. 8 . . . it's too good an idea to ignore.

Paid for by the Citizen's Committee for the Civic Center, Dick White, Chairman; E. N. Thompson, Treasurer.

Leonardo lurking under fresco?

Florence, Italy (AP) — An American-financed research team, using sound and heat for the first time to look for art, has concluded that a lost masterpiece by Leonardo da Vinci is probably under another fresco in Florence's Great Council Hall.

Now it's up to Italian authorities to decide whether to look under the vast wall painting by Giorgio Vasari, who remodeled the room four centuries ago, and see if the researchers are right.

"We've passed the ball to them at this point," said Maurizio Seracini, scientific director of the year-long project that used ultrasonic and infrared equipment.

Leonardo's "Battle of Angiari," commemorating a 1440 Florentine victory, was completed in the early 16th century during Florence's brief history as a republic. It disappeared after the dukes took over and ordered Vasari to remodel the hall in 1563.

Some art historians believe Leonardo used an untried fresco technique and the colors faded away. Others believe the fresco was covered up because it glorified the republic.

The Vasari painting is a battle scene that covers one third of a wall of the room, which is located in the Palazzo Vecchio, the city hall, and is used mostly as a museum and occasionally for public meetings.

Travers Newton, an art restoration expert from Los Angeles who came to Florence in 1974, concluded from historical evidence that the Vasari painting was the most likely spot to look for the somewhat smaller Leonardo, but he did not have the equipment to do so.

Seracini, who was born in Florence and studied engineering at the University of California at San Diego, brought his team of experts into the hall in October 1976.

In an interview in Rome with Associated Press newsman Michael J. Duffy, he said the team zeroed in on the Vasari painting after reconstructing a picture of the hall as it was in the early 16th century and determining the layers of material beneath the surface.

"We found that from both acoustical and thermal tests, this spot shows a different behavior from any other layers of subsurface plaster in the whole hall," Seracini said.

Four leather-bound volumes summarizing the research were presented Thursday to a special commission appointed to find the Leonardo. It was to study the reports and meet Dec. 12 to decide what to do next.

Seracini said he and his colleagues used all existing "non-destructive" measures for locating the Leonardo. The next step, he said, would be to make a small hole in the Vasari painting to take pigment samples and gather further evidence.

American industrialist Armand Hammer, who financed the final stage of the Florence research following earlier grants by the Kress Foundation and the Smithsonian Institution, has said he would be willing to provide more funds if permission is given to look behind the Vasari.

Last year charcoal drawings believed to have been done by Michelangelo were found under layers of whitewash and plaster in Florence's Basilica of San Lorenzo. In 1974, workmen in Rome uncovered an 18-inch bust of Christ thought to be the original head of Michelangelo's Pieta Rondanini.

Dignity sought for all positions

Des Moines (UPI) — The restoration of dignity to all jobs is one way to get people off welfare, according to Cecil Reed, a regional U.S. Labor Department official.

"Every human endeavor has to have some dignity — the service of the garbage man, the work of the janitor. Build on the abilities that minorities have," Reed said.

YOUR KNEES CAN TAKE UNITED.

OR YOUR KNEES CAN TAKE FRONTIER.

Now, your knees have a choice. Because now, the three of you can fly Frontier Airlines from Lincoln nonstop to Chicago.

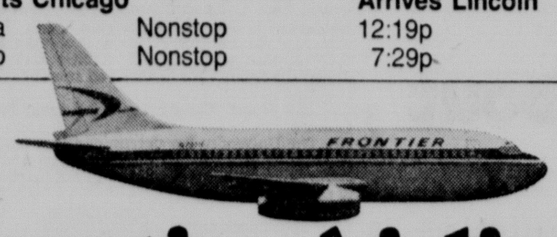

Unlike United, Frontier sells only one class of tickets. But we put as much legroom between our seats as other airlines normally offer only their first class passengers. So when you choose Frontier, your knees can stretch out in first class comfort, while you're paying only coach fare.

And when you choose Frontier, we'll get you to Chicago in time for a mid-morning meeting. And we can fly you back home the same day. Or you can use our morning flight to make easy connections to major eastern cities.

So now you have a decision to make. You can fly United to Chicago. Or you can fly Frontier Airlines. But if you fly Frontier, and let your knees make the decision for you, it'll be no contest.

For more information and reservations, call a Professional Travel Agent, or Frontier at 477-5281.

Vehicle lands in ditch when driver 'blacks out'

A 60-year-old Lincoln woman escaped serious injury Monday night after the vehicle she was driving plunged into a water-filled ditch near Cornhusker and 27th Street. Police said the woman was driving an El Camino eastbound on Cornhusker when she crossed the median and westbound lanes and plunged over the north shoulder of Cornhusker. The woman apparently "blacked out" and doesn't remember what happened, police said. The woman bruised her right leg, but was not treated for injuries. She was ticketed for negligent driving, police said.

19 confirmed hepatitis cases said linked to Omaha luncheon

Omaha (AP) — Nineteen confirmed cases of hepatitis, a disease affecting the liver, have been reported among businessmen attending a luncheon Sept. 26 in Omaha.

Local and state officials are contacting all of the more than 200 Nebraskans and Iowans who attended the luncheon.

John Wiley, epidemiologist with the Omaha-Douglas County Health Department, said an investigation is continuing into the possible source of the outbreak.

The type of hepatitis involved is caused by a virus. Officials said one way it can be spread is having an infected person handle food.

Official a suicide

Tokyo (AP) — Former Chinese Minister of Culture Yu Hui-yung, who had been criticized as "a cat's paw" of the so-called Gang of Four, committed suicide by taking poison recently, Japan's Kyodo news service said.

WANT TO KNOW WHAT REALLY GOES ON AT 7131 WILLOW?

It's not an ordinary house.

The energy team—Cengas, Hub Hall and Bryant—designed a unique new home using the latest energy conservation techniques. Natural gas, solar energy, quality construction and the latest in energy saving equipment are combined to give the greatest efficiency possible to save energy and money, too!

Here's how it works.

Builder Hub Hall put six inches of insulation in the outside walls and twelve inches in the ceiling of the Lincoln home. Welded glass windows, as well as storm windows, protect from wind, heat and cold. Before the drywall was applied, the exterior walls were wrapped in a special polyethylene covering to prevent vapor loss and air infiltration.

In the solar unit, heat is collected behind a series of glass windows. The sun heats the air in the collector and a fan sends it to the solar storage area, where it is absorbed in trays of eutectic salt. The air is then returned to the collector for reheating. The storage trays retain the heat for use until the thermostat calls for heat.

Since solar energy will not supply all of the heating requirements in a midlands home, the energy team selected a Bryant Deluxe gas furnace, which uses up to 20% less gas than conventional units. It's equipped with Bryant's Electronic Ignition System and Vent Mizer™ Flue Damper which automatically locks in heated indoor air.

Cengas will monitor the efficiency of the natural gas/solar combination over the coming heating season so you'll know what you can save on a gas/solar heating system.

The energy team wants to share its knowledge about saving energy. If you're thinking about building, remodeling, or replacing your heating system, ask your energy team about energy saving design, construction and equipment. You'll save energy and money, too.

Strong rally continues

New York (AP) — The stock market put together a broad advance Monday, extending the strong rally that began late last week.

Analysts said the market benefited from a letup in fears of tighter credit, as well as anticipation of favorable dividend action by General Motors Corp.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 6.50 to 816.44, bringing its gain over the last three sessions to 15.59 points.

Advances outnumbered declines by a wide margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market's latest upturn came after the Dow Jones industrial average made a successful stand at 800 for the second time in the past two weeks.

Brokers said buying was also encouraged by a belief that recent fears of further credit-tightening by the Federal Reserve were excessive.

In addition, they cited anticipation of a dividend increase by General Motors, the nation's second largest industrial company and by far its largest private employer with close to 750,000 people on its payroll.

Dow Ind. +6.50

Those expectations were fulfilled at the close when GM declared a fourth-quarter payout of $3.25 a share, including a $2.25 "special" dividend and an increased "regular" dividend of $1.

The "regular" dividend in the first three quarters of this year was 85 cents.

GM stock was up 1⅜ at 68⅝ as of the 4 p.m. close of the NYSE. Even with that gain, the stock carries an indicated dividend yield of nearly 10 per cent.

Monday's action brought the total dividend paid this year by the company to $6.80 a share.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrials gained .76 to 101.60, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was up .71 at 92.29.

The day's biggest gainer was Baker Industries, up 8¼ at 19⅜. Borg-Warner Corp. said it had bought 8.9 percent of Baker's stock and planned to offer $20 a share for the rest.

Lykes Corp. added ¾ to 7. On Friday the company and LTV said they had agreed in principle on a merger plan.

Sony led the active list, down ⅛ at 7¾ on turnover of better than a million shares. Several large blocks of the stock changed hands at 7¾ and 7⅞.

Houston Oil & Minerals, the volume leader among American Stock Exchange issues, rose 1 to 28¾.

The Amex market value index climbed .79 to 113.67.

In the over-the-counter market, the NASDAQ composite index closed at 97.85, up .64.

Barrows, gilts 25-50¢ lower

Omaha (AP) — Barrows and gilts were moderately active at 25-50 cent lower tickets with weights over 250 lbs. 50 cents lower and instances $1.00 lower while sows sold steady to 75 cents lower on the Omaha Livestock Market Monday.

With 6,000 hogs on offer, U.S. 1-3's weighing 200-240 pounds brought $39.00-$39.50.

Sows were steady to 75 cents lower with 300-600 pounders bringing $33.00-$33.50.

Rains help boost futures

Chicago (AP) — Harvest-delaying rains and beliefs that a record amount of soybeans was exported last week boosted futures prices Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Soybeans advanced about 17 cents a bushel and soybean meal was sharply higher. Oil deliveries, however, finished just under 20 points ahead.

Corn deliveries continued strong, rising more than three cents. Wheat and oats averaged gains of more than two cents a bushel.

5% oil price rise expected

Vienna, Austria (AP) — The economic commission of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries met here Monday to prepare for a ministerial meeting next month at which the cartel is expected to again raise the price of oil, probably by 5 percent.

The meeting opened as the authoritative Middle East Economic Survey reported "there is no hope" that the oil exporters will heed U.S. calls for an oil price freeze through 1978.

The oil newsletter said that even Saudi Arabia, "the most moderate of the moderates," has declared that some increase is justified. The Saudis have led efforts to keep down the price of oil at recent OPEC conferences.

The basic price of oil is currently $12.70 a barrel. Oil ministers of the 13-nation OPEC will be meeting in Caracas, Venezuela, on Dec. 20 to decide its prices for 1978 and to discuss future production levels.

A 5 percent increase in the price of crude would mean an increase of about 1½ cents a gallon at American pumps. The United States imports about 40 percent of its oil from OPEC members.

OPEC spokesman Hamid Zaheri said a review of oil prices was one of the topics to be discussed at the week-long preparatory meeting here. The meeting is being held behind closed doors.

The economic commission is only an advisory body. But it is expected to compile evidence that the sagging dollar and the swelling cost of imports from industrialized countries is eating into OPEC oil revenues.

The reports of an impending price hike contrasted with a statement Sunday by Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who said after returning from visits to Saudi Arabia, Iran and Kuwait that he thought there was a chance OPEC would not raise prices for some time.

"It has already become quite clear that there is no hope of even the most moderate OPEC producer heeding the U.S. call for a price freeze through all or part of 1978," MEES wrote.

Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates and Iraq have all complained recently about the downward slide of the dollar, the accepted unit of payment for oil sales, and demanded that oil prices be raised.

"The OPEC countries have suffered severely from inflation and the sinking dollar," Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul-Karim said in an interview published in Kuwait.

MEES quoted an unidentified oil minister as saying: "If the Saudis agree to 5 percent, they will have a deal as far as my country is concerned. But we couldn't go for anything below that."

The review noted that the moderates in OPEC would have to agree to a price increase to avoid a split such as occurred at last December's meeting in Doha, Qatar.

There, the Saudis and the United Arab Emirates raised their prices by 5 percent while the other 11 members went for 10 percent immediately and planned another 5 percent increase in July. The rift was healed in June when all members agreed on 10 percent.

The split "is above all what the OPEC partners are determined to avoid this time," MEES wrote.

The newsletter also reported that Saudi Arabia's daily production of crude oil averaged 9.35 million barrels during the first half of 1977, an increase of 14.5 percent over the first half of 1976. Some observers said the Saudis may be trying to keep oil in plentiful supply to discourage the price hawks in OPEC from making overly steep demands.

Soviets celebrate with military show

Moscow (AP) — Hundreds of tanks and rockets rumbled through Red Square Monday as the Soviet Union celebrated the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with its biggest military parade in years.

For the first time since 1974, tracked vehicles including new T-72 tanks clanked across the cobblestones. The roar of their engines reverberating off the Kremlin walls during the morning parade.

Western military observers said they saw no new missiles among the weapons that rolled past.

Later, a massive fireworks display of 60 multicolored salvoes lit up the sky over Moscow.

The brilliant fireworks were shot from 4,000 salute guns ringing the edges of the city. An overcast prevented the display from being seen clearly in the center of the Soviet capital.

In a light sprinkle of snow, Politburo leaders stood atop Lenin's mausoleum to watch the tanks, armored personnel carriers, rockets and artillery pieces pass. The artillery included two self-propelled howitzers not displayed before.

President Leonid I. Brezhnev and other leaders remained throughout the two-hour parade, in which more than 100,000 cheering, chanting Muscovites took part.

But party theoretician Mikhail Suslov disappeared from view within the first 15 minutes, before the official photograph of the Politburo was taken. Tass later reported that Suslov took part in a post-parade reception. No explanation was given for his departure.

At the Kremlin reception, Brezhnev declared "peace and socialism are inseparable. We will do everything in our power for easing the threat of war, for strengthening peaceful cooperation among states."

He noted that "Soviet people live better today than ever before both in spiritual and material respects. At the same time, we can clearly see what still needs polishing up and improvement, and know how it shall be and will be done."

About 330 military vehicles raced through the square, a much bigger display than the 151 vehicles that were included in each of the last two parades. Western observers saw this increase as part of the major celebrations that have been building up throughout the year to mark the 60th anniversary.

Addressing thousands of troops massed on the square, Defense Minister Dmitri F. Ustinov told them they were duty-bound to be "in constant combat readiness." He said Soviet defense potential is "at such a level as to discourage anyone who may risk disturbing our peaceful life."

Forty-six T-72 tanks were displayed along with 20 other pieces of heavy armored equipment. The T-72 has not been observed close-up before by Westerners, although it has been deployed for almost a year by Soviet forces in East Germany.

Western military experts say it carries a crew of three, has an automatic loader for its 115mm gun and can fire on the move with the aid of a laser rangefinder.

However, informed sources said the tank did not appear to be carrving its full complement of equipment during the parade.

U.S.-U.S.S.R. arms race in space feared by Carter

Washington (UPI) — President Carter is concerned a "major arms race" may develop around killer satellites which the Soviet Union apparently already has tested, Press secretary Jody Powell said Monday.

"We are concerned about the prospect of the major superpowers being involved in an accelerated major arms race in this area," Powell told reporters.

Powell volunteered his comments, saying, "We have expressed our concern to the Soviets."

"We do feel . . . it would be unfortunate if the United States and the Soviet Union became involved in competition in this area," Powell said.

The Pentagon has announced the Soviets have conducted several experiments that appear to involve simulated attacks by one space satellite against another.

On the U.S. side, "we do have an R-D (research and development) program in that area which we consider to be quite adequate for the time being," Powell said.

Zamora looks down as he is sentenced.

15-year-old killer sentenced to life

Miami (AP) — Ronny Zamora, 15, convicted of murder last month despite his claim that television drove him to violence, was sentenced to life in prison Monday with no possibility of parole for 25 years.

Circuit Judge Paul Baker, overruling defense motions to upset the conviction or at least be lenient, also sentenced Zamora to 53 years on companion charges of burglary and assault.

"He is sick . . . suicidal," said defense attorney Ellis Rubin, who had argued during the trial that Zamora was driven insane by an overdose of television violence. He urged Baker to withhold sentencing and instead commit Zamora to a program for youthful offenders.

Rubin even presented petitions from Zamora's school mates urging leniency.

Prosecutor Tom Headley, however, said the law on first-degree murder clearly mandated a life sentence with no parole for 25 years. The only alternative to life was the death penalty, which he had not sought.

In his brief sentencing remarks, Baker noted that a juvenile court had considered the case serious enough to forward it to adult court.

Zamora, a Miami Beach high school student, admitted killing his 83-year-old neighbor, Elinor Haggart, when she surprised him and a pal as they ransacked her home last spring.

Looking on silently from the side of the courtroom was Darryl Agrella, 14, who faces the same charges.

Zamora's family sat behind him, his mother Yolanda crying softly during Rubin's final pleas for leniency.

The trial attracted world attention for the novel defense argument that Zamora killed while temporarily intoxicated by violence he had seen on the television detective shows he habitually watched.

It was the first Florida trial to be extensively covered by courtroom cameras since the state Supreme Court ordered a one-year experiment to see whether such coverage would disrupt proceedings.

During the trial last month, Baker had blocked efforts to bolster the defense theory with testimony by television detective Telly Savalas and by a psychologist who had studied television violence. The psychologist wasn't allowed to testify when she told Baker she didn't know any case in which a television show made someone kill.

Those rulings were challenged Monday, as they were during the trial. Baker overruled the new motion without explanation.

The defense has said it will appeal.

As during the trial, television and still cameras recorded the proceedings.

Court to consider $560 million ceiling

Washington (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a case the government says could determine the future of nuclear energy development in the United States, agreed Monday to decide whether power plant operators ever may be sued for more than $560 million for a nuclear accident.

The justices said they will review a decision by a federal judge in North Carolina that the liability ceiling approved by Congress is unconstitutional.

Congress passed the Price-Anderson Act in 1957 to help encourage private development of nuclear energy. Several amendments to the original legislation have upped the maximum amount of liability facing nuclear plant owners for a major nuclear accident or catastrophe.

U.S. District Judge James B. McMillan ruled last March that such a limit denies persons who might be injured in such a "nuclear incident" their right to due process and equal protection of the law.

Justice Department attorneys, appealing McMillan's ruling for the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission, said it "could stand as a major impediment to further private development of nuclear energy in this nation."

Because available insurance is inadequate, the government said, power companies would not build plants if confronted with unlimited liability.

In other matters Monday, the court:

—Let stand a $214,000 libel suit defeat suffered by TODAY, a Brevard County, Fla., newspaper.

One of the questions raised in the newspaper's appeal that the justices refused to review is whether public officials or public figures are entitled to punitive damages in libel suits. A Florida jury awarded a Vero Beach building official $100,000 in punitive damages on top of $114,000 in compensatory damages in his suit against TODAY.

—Refused to consider expanding the scope of a controversial decision which last year cut off access to federal courts for many state prisoners. The court's action means Ohio authorities must give a new trial to a convicted sex murderer who led police to the body of his 9-year-old victim.

—Left intact a lower court's order that Pennsylvania pay $9 million to thousands of residents in state mental hospitals — money that was taken in full or partial payment for care and maintenance costs.

—Let stand a court decision that the sellers of London commodity options claim threatens to put almost all of them out of business. The options sellers had been challenging new federal regulations which drastically change the way they do business.

Coal mine violations reported

Washington (AP) — A federal agency says faulty ventilation, safety violations and missed inspections preceded two coal mine explosions in Kentucky which killed 26 men, according to a published report.

A federal judge in Catlettsburg, Ky., has banned publication of investigation findings by the U.S. Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration on the March 1976 explosions at the Scotia Coal Co. mine in eastern Kentucky.

But a report in a Washington newsletter, Coal Outlook, said Monday that MESA's investigation turned up "at least a dozen" violations of federal safety regulations which may have contributed to the deadly explosions.

Bus loop given permanent OK

It's official. After more than a year of controversy, the downtown bus loop is now a permanent part of Lincoln Transportation System routes.

The loop, a rectangular route on 14th, Q, 11th and J streets, was approved by the City Council Monday afternoon on a 5-2 vote. Councilmen Bob Jeambey and Bob Sikyta objected to the route and voted against adoption.

Jeambey criticized LTS for failure to study, and try, alternate routes to the loop. The loop has been approved for six-month trial periods since it was introduced in August 1976. Critics have complained about buses crossing lanes of traffic to make the necessary turns on the route, but LTS claims there are no feasible alternatives.

Bus Manager Jim Donaghey told the council there is no alternative to having buses make left-hand turns, no matter what route is established. Mayor Helen Boosalis, speaking in favor of the loop, said the only changes would come if the one-way street routing was all changed. She noted that several things hinged on a final approval of the loop.

Among them, she said, is a decision by Brandeis to cooperate in building a shelter for bus riders who wait on the east side of their building at 11th and N streets. Store officials said they would help the city build a shelter if the loop becomes permanent, she added.

An attempt by Jeambey and Sikyta to give the loop another six-month trial, through an amendment to the original resolution, failed, and the final vote was taken.

Chateau LaFleur compromise nixed

The City Council decided Monday to take a dispute with the owners of Chateau LaFleur to court in order to force improvements promised almost 10 years ago.

On a 4-3 vote, the council rejected the owners' offer to perform drainage work in exchange for cancellation of a promised golf course and swimming pool.

Ownership of the apartment and townhouse complex changed hands in 1975 when Omaha developer Sterling Flott sold it to a German group headed by Sophie Graf of Munich, West Germany. The German owners contend they weren't aware of the promised improvements at the time fo purchase. Bonds for the improvements haven't been collected but information on the bonded improvements is on file in the city clerk's office, city officials said.

The city has toughened its policy on guaranteeing improvements, and City Attorney Charles Humble says the court case would be a good test as to how the city can settle some similar disputes filed earlier.

Councilmen Bob Sikyta, Bob Jeambey, Richard Baker and John Robinson voted against a compromise. Councilmen Steve Cook, Leo Scherer and Joe Hampton voted for it.

City will receive only Sept. 3 flooding claims

The City Council has determined it can only receive claims for all flood damage related to the Sept. 3 storm, which left heaviest damage in the 42nd Street and Colfax Avenue area.

That was the word from Council Chairman Dick Baker Monday afternoon following a closed door session with City Attorney Charles Humble. Baker told the audience at the regular council meeting that there would be no debate on the claims, and that all would be referred to the general adjustment bureau of the city's insurance carrier, Western Casualty.

Claims for $128,445 have been filed by 42 residents, city officials said.

Downtown streets said to open by Thanksgiving

Streets in downtown Lincoln should all be open to normal traffic by Thanksgiving, according to city officials.

During Monday morning meetings of the City Council, Tom Cast, city project engineer, said that all but phase one of the Que Place project, 15th Street from Q to P streets and 11th Street from O to R streets, will be completed. That work will be finished next spring, he added.

Street construction on 12th from P to R streets and on 14th from O to R streets should be completed within the next few weeks, he said. All street construction in the downtown area should be completed by the fall of 1978, he added.

Williams' arrest is sought for Minnesota kidnap charge

The Lancaster County Sheriff's Office received an arrest warrant for accused murderer Robert E. Williams on a charge of kidnapping a man from Fridley, Minn.

According to the warrant from Anoka County, Minn., Williams is charged with kidnapping Walter Behun Aug. 13 and forcing him at gunpoint to drive to a railroad yard in St. Paul, Minn. Behun was then bound and gagged, and left in an empty caboose, an affidavit accompanying the warrant said.

Williams' trial is scheduled in Lancaster County District Court on murder and sexual assault charges.

Vandals steal 40 gas caps at Lincoln car dealership

Vandals with a strange fascination for gas caps struck Misle Chevrolet at 4950 O St. over the weekend, according to police reports.

Some 49 gas tank caps, all round and all on the outside areas of the vehicles. Some were chrome, others were painted the same color as the vehicles, reports showed. The cost to replace the caps was estimated at $250.

The same persons also are thought to be responsible for removing the convertible top from a 1975 Corvette and stealing the insignia from the inside of the car. Damage to the car and the loss of the missing items was put at $200.

The car dealership also said the vandals rolled or drove the Corvette into another car and broke the glass out of a gas pump and an air pump.

Forged government checks cashed by Lincoln businesses

Forged government checks totalling more than $1,600 were cashed by Lincoln businesses in mid-October, police reports show.

The checks were from the federal Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and were passed by a man who was described as white, in his 20s and with dark hair.

The businesses affected were Lincoln Bank South, which cashed a forged check for $766.84; Mr. B IGA, 48th and Van Dorn Sts., $298.48; Safeway, 16th and South Sts., $293.18; and Hinky Dinky 48th and Van Dorn Sts., $294.78.

Drugstore reports burglary

Depressant drugs were reported stolen from Winter Drug, 1211 N. 10th St., over the weekend.

Police reports show that 1150 Valium, between 250 and 400 Librium and 100 Darvon tablets were stolen in a burglary. The commercial value of the drugs was estimated at $147.

Police said the front door of the store had a faulty lock.

Refrigerator defrost studied

New York (UPI) — An automatic - defrost refrigerator - freezer takes about 60 percent more energy to operate than a model of similar size you must defrost manually. That figure is from a recent Cornell University cooperative extension bulletin. It adds that frost allowed to build up more than one-fourth inch in thickness acts as an insulator, reducing the efficiency of the appliance and increasing operating costs.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast

By Sidney Omarr

Tuesday, November 8, 1977

Pisces I wish I had met: Nijinsky. Pisces I met and revered: Anais Nin. Pisces astrology buff: Jackie Gleason. Pisces who changed our concept of the universe: Galileo. Pisces who enhanced our concept of love: Ovid. Pisces whose name was chosen by the numbers: Edward Albert. Pisces great who is fascinated by astrology: Lawrence Durrell. Pisces with talent that overflows: Liza Minnelli. Pisces whose psychic feats are legendary: Edgar Cayce.

☆ ☆ ☆

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on contract, marital status, public relations, getting an earful of views opposite your own. Capricorn, Cancer individuals figure prominently. Older person aids in business enterprise.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on low-key approach, diet, vitamins, nutrition, resolutions concerning health, recreation, work. You are finishing a cycle. What worried you in past is part of a vanished era. Let it be!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight creativity—be ready for change, travel, variety, intensified relationships. Leo, Aquarius persons figure in picture. You make inroads in areas previously restricted. You are persuasive, charismatic.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Security, long-term investments, emotional responses are part of your personal scenario. One you have known wants more than a nodding acquaintance. Stop seeing this person—or make a substantial commitment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Highlight intellectual curiosity, versatility—make inquiries, persist until answers are obtained. Gemini, Sagittarius figure prominently—so does number "3." Popularity increases.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dig for information. Obtain hint from Virgo message. Get views on record. You gain allies. Member of opposite sex is drawn to you. Love could be very much a part of your personal drama.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family secret is discussed. Confidential matters are viewed from standpoint of security. Build, repair, cement friendship. Make intelligent concessions; be diplomatic. Be aware of tone of your voice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on desire, friendship, wish fulfillment—know difference between reality and illusion. Pleasant dream is fine, but don't bank on it. Avoid extravagance. Pisces, Virgo persons figure in scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Business, production, advancement—these are featured. One in position to pull strings will help, provided you assume added responsibility. Say "Yes" to challenge or overtime assignment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than initiate projects. Get finer on pulse of public. Concentrate on display, distribution, merchandising concepts. Aries, Libra figure prominently—and so does number "9."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're abel to clarify a puzzle—involves money, reputation, member of opposite sex. Scorpio, Leo persons figure in scenario. Stress originality, dedication—illustrate principles, beliefs.

IF NOVEMBER 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dedicated, forceful, vibrant, creative, competitive and stubborn. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. Emotional wound, suffered earlier this year, will heal. This month you will be rid of a burden. Big things in store for you in 1978—marriage, business, addition to family. You made a new start this past March—you'll reap dividends as result of arrangement made then.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
